Why Kill Yourself?

STRAUSS & CO., LTD., great grain firm, failed disastrously in London, for more than one million pounds. Henry Charles Whitehouse, general manager of the firm in India, jumped from the fourth story of the Taj Mahal Hotel in Bombay and killed himself.

They take those things seriously abroad. Here the gentleman would have gone to Palm Beach.

Good news. The President wants the United States to assume leadership in aviation, and, immediately important and encouraging, the President favors the establishment of a transatlantic line of dirigibles. Such airships would cross the ocean in less than half the time of the fastest giant passenger ship, and a fleet of three dirigibles would cost less than half as much as one of the great liners.

The way to put the United States "first in aviation" and make the country safe is to build an air fleet of about four thousand planes.

Put a man on a whiskey diet, or start him on a drug habit, and you cannot easily change him, once he starts. It remains to be seen what will happen when millions of people that have been taught the "easy government money" habit are told, as they must be eventually, that the time has come, not "to taper off," but to stop suddenly.

How difficult it may be was shown in Chicago the other day, when the distracted mother of a crippled son, who happened to be a college graduate, could not get on the relief role. She and her son went to the bureau of relief, shot three of the officials, and then killed themselves. Multiply that by a million, or five million, and you would have real trouble.

It is not too soon to prepare for the government money "tapering off" process that must come. It rarely works with drug fiends. It may not work with recipients of government money.

If Dr. Townsend's theory should go through, and the government decides to print twenty-four thousand million new paper dollars every year, giving everybody sixty years old two hundred dollars a month, that might postpone the difficulty.

But inflation would destroy the buying power of the new dollars, and there would be a new trouble.

Settled habits are difficult to cure, including the bootlegging habit. Secretary Morgenthau asks Congress to restore immediately one thousand investigators of the internal revenue bureau's alcohol unit to the federal payroll.

This is necessary, he says, to prevent "a breakdown in the liquor law enforcement program." Bootleggers that have been gathering in profits to the tune of millions a year do not willingly abandon their "habit."

Other nations back and fill, move left, move right. Japan goes straight ahead, makes plans, discusses them after she has carried them out, usually suggesting that they "just happened." Japan now demands from China an "alliance" that would mean Tokio ruling China's 400,000,000, as Rome, in ancient days, ruled half the earth. Japan would dismiss all "western advisers" from China, control Chinese loans, train and direct China's army.

Remembering the statement of the famous British general, "Chinese Gordon," that "there is no better fighting man on earth than the Chinese soldier," all this should interest the western world.

United Asia, turning its mind and desire for conquest to the west, coming with airplanes, instead of the shaggy ponies of Jenghis Khan, might disturb western Europe, or America.

Russia realizes it. She has increased her army to nine hundred and forty thousand men and increased here military expenditures 300 per cent.

The all-union congress of Soviets shouted with joy, the 2000 delegates rising, when Stalin's assistant defense commissar announced an army doubled in size, to be backed by the world's greatest air fleet and great submarine fleet.

Delegates met in the old throne room of the great Kremlin Palace in Moscow, and when Defense Commissar Tukhachevesky shouted "the Red army will help finish the revolution in the Soviet Union and the world," two thousand delegates yelled alike, and left singing the "Internationale."

Possibly Japan will interfere with Stalin's plan to spread revolution over the whole world. If not, a "capitalist country like this" would have something to think about.

It might even think hard enough to build a few submarines and airplanes of its own.

TROOPS ACT ON HUEY'S RETURN

By Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 1 — Backed by heavily armed National Guardsmen, Senator Huey P. Long hurried into Baton Rouge today from Washington and struck swiftly at his opponents with the arrest of Ernest Bourgeois, leader of the Square Deal Association which has been demanding the end of his dictatorial rule of Louisiana.

The militant Bourgeois was arrested by a detachment of National Guardsmen at the Square Deal Association headquarters here.

He was taken to military headquarters in the State House apparently for questioning by Brigadier-General Louis G. Guerre, chief of the state police.

Meanwhile Long entrenched his position under martial law to resume his court hearing this afternoon into his charge that certain public officials and other citizens of the Baton Rouge area had plotted his death.

Long was whisked here from New Orleans immediately after he left his train from Washington at a New Orleans railroad station and set up his dictatorship headquarters in the Heidelberg Hotel.

From there he directed his emissaries to and fro in strict military style with the entire parish of East Baton Rouge under rifle patrol.

Man Attacked

As Long was alighting from his train in New Orleans, Leon Trice, Associated Press staff photographer, was attacked by Joe Messina, Long's chief bodyguard, with a blackjack and his camera was stomped and ruined.

Trice had just snapped a photograph of the Senator when Messina attacked him without warning and Long told his guard to "give it to him."

Trice received two blows from Messina. He was given hospital treatment and dismissed.

Long then rushed to Baton Rouge by automobile and placed himself behind the bayonets of national guardsmen and the protection of state police in plain clothes.

There he directed his plans in the utmost secrecy.

26 HURT In Rail CRASH

FRAMINGHAM CAR WRECKED

Twenty-six passengers were injured today when a New Haven railroad gasoline car crashed into a string of freight cars just outside Framingham station.

The passenger car, bound from Marlboro to Framingham, where connections are made for Boston, ran through an open switch, it was reported.

The front end of the gasoline car was demolished, as was one of the freight cars, but Engineer George Spencer of 10 Frederick street, Framingham, was removed from his cab without a scratch.

One Dying

Six of his passengers, however, had to be hurried to Framingham-Union Hospital, one of them Leslie Rylander of Framingham, in a dying condition. Twenty others were treated for injuries at the scene of the accident.

Rylander, baggageman, was hurled through a plate-glass door that separated the baggage compartment from the rest of the coach.

Rylander, 56 years old, has worked for the New Haven for 32 years and never before figured in an accident. His wife and his son, Everett, 30, of Fall River, hurried to the hospital. Another son, Murton, 24, was called from Kingston, N. H.

Confusion reigned for a few minutes after the crash. Women passengers—several of them Boston University co-eds—began to scream, but quickly regained their composure.

Several of the car's occupants are well known in Boston. Among these are John Eastman, former chairman of the Wellesley selectmen; Howard P. Brown, attorney, and Edward B. Bement, vice president of the C. A. Esty Paper Company.

Class Hurled

The crash occurred about 100 yards away from the Framingham station just a few minutes after 8 a. m.

The force of the impact hurled passengers out of their seats and showered them with broken glass.

Crowded with commuters, Framingham station was transformed into a field hospital. More serious cases were hurried to the hospital by ambulance and cab. Other passengers were taken to the waiting room.

At the station, Dr. Edward Reagan and Dr. J. Harry McCann hurriedly examined and treated passengers requiring aid.

Meanwhile, the railroad began its investigation. Engineer Spencer and Joseph Benson, conductor of the one-car train, made a detailed report.

Spencer said sun glare on snow blinded him. He said he turned off power and applied brakes when he realized his car had entered the siding.

Investigators also planned to question Henry Le Page, switchman of the freight. It was believed his duty to close the switch.

Blame 'Snow Glare' for This

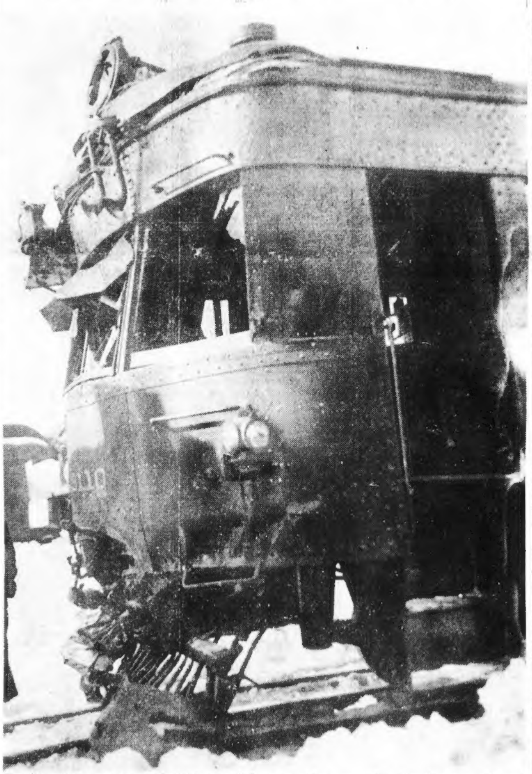
One-Car "Gas" Train After Crash



Crashing into a string of freight cars, left on a siding near the Framingham railroad station, this New Haven gasoline car had very much the worst of the encounter. Injuries were suffered by 26 persons, including a baggage man who may die. "Snow glare" blinded the operator of the car he said. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 1—The combined opinion of eight state experts that Bruno Richard Hauptmann wrote the Lindbergh ransom notes was disputed today by the first defense expert, and Hauptmann's attorneys formally disclaimed part of the so-called "Fisch myth."

Former intimations that the dead Isador Fisch might have written the notes or kidnaped and slain baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., were wiped away by the defense chief, Edward J. Reilly, during a recess argument.

Reilly held, nevertheless, to a contention that Fisch, not Hauptmann, was the receiver of the futile $50,000 Lindbergh ransom.

Trendley declared it his opinion that the important first ransom note, known as the nursery note, "was written by a left-handed man trying to disguise his handwriting."

He charged, moreover, that the chart prepared by Albert S. Osborn, chief handwriting expert for the state, used by Osborn and other experts to illustrate basis for comparing the ransom notes with Hauptmann's handwriting, ignored all but three words in the first note.

Reilly declared in connection with the Fisch matter:

"We never contended Fisch wrote the notes or that he perpetrated the crime. I believe that he got the ransom money. We don't know who wrote the ransom notes."

The argument concerned a Christmas card handed to Trendley with a query as to any possible similarities between the handwriting on it and the handwriting in the 14 ransom notes.

The state objected. The card was not immediately identified, though the discussion that followed indicated it was from Fisch.

Reilly argued:

"We are not here to prove who wrote the ransom notes, but to prove Hauptmann didn't write them."

Trendley, on the stand, was asked by Reilly if he had studied all the evidence introduced by the state's array of hand-writing experts. Trendley said he had.

Testimony Today

Following are today's proceedings in the Bruno Richard Hauptmann trial in Flemington, N. J.

Justice Trenchard had delayed the opening of the session for a conference in chambers with Reilly and Joseph Lanigan, of the prosecution staff.

Attorney-General David T. Wilentz addressed Justice Trenchard and referred to the statement yesterday of Louis Kiss, New York silk painter, that he took his child to a hospital a week before the kidnaping.

Kiss testified he saw Hauptmann in the Fredericksen bakery on the kidnap night and fixed the time as one week after the hospitalization of the child.

Wilentz asked that hospital records be admitted to show the child was received at 1:20 a. m.

WORDS, SYMBOLS MISSING, HE SAYS

Sees Photo Distortion

on February 22, 1932. A week after that date, the State pointed out, would be February 29, and not March 1.

Reilly resumed questioning of John M. Trendley, of East St. Louis, Ill., handwriting expert. Trendley told of examining the Hauptmann writings, the ransom notes and the charts of the state experts.

Says Bruno Did Not Pen Ransom Notes

Q (by Reilly)—As a result of your study, are you in a position to render an opinion as to whether Hauptmann wrote the ransom notes? A—In my opinion, he did not.

Trendley said he studied the ransom notes for over two hours. He also had carefully examined specimens of Hauptmann's penmanship. He had studied the various charts the state had introduced in connection with the handwriting.

Reilly drew the witness' attention to charts prepared by Albert S. Osborn, dean of the state's chirographical corps.

Q—I show you the ransom nursery note and call your attention to the "D." Do you find on Mr. Osborn's charts the "D" which begins the note?

Trendley got down from the stand and looked over the array of great black and white exhibits on the wall.

"I cannot find it here," he said.

Q—Will you point out if the "ear" of "D-ear" is on Mr. Osborn's chart? A—It is not on there.

Reilly was moving in on a broad attack on the formidable testimony of the state handwriting experts.

Q—Isn't it a fact, Mr. Trendley, that when the photographs of Hauptmann's writing and the ransom notes were taken, only certain letters and words from the various writings were photographed? A—Yes.

Reilly then began to bring out how certain unusual things in the ransom notes were not photographed in the state's exhibits.

One of these was an exclamation mark, thus, "Dear Sir!" in the ransom notes.

Reilly glanced significantly at the jury as he asked:

Q—Does that exclamation mark appear any place in the exhibits of Mr. Osborn? A—No. It does not.

Reilly passed the ransom note to the jurors and asked them to observe the unusual punctuation "Dear Sir!"

Q—Is it a fact that the word "Dear" in the ransom notes does not appear on Mr. Osborn's charts? A—It does not.

Q—Does the letter "S" in the next word "Sir" appear on Mr. Osborn's charts? A—I don't see it.

First Time Jury Handles Notes

Trendley began to point out differences in the handwriting of Hauptmann and the penmanship of the ransom notes.

Q—I ask you, Mr. Trendley, to take the word "have," the first word of the ransom note. Is it not true that the "a" is different than that in "dear?" A—Yes, it has a 25 per cent more slant to the left.

Reilly passed the ransom note to the jury and told them to observe the difference.

It was the first time in the trial the jurors had been allowed to handle one of the 14 kidnap notes. They are kept in cellophane when not in use.

Q—The salutation, "Dear Sir," —Does it not in the note have an exclamation point after it? A—Yes.

Q—Is it on the charts? A—No.

Q—Is it fair to assume that Mr. Osborn has failed to put on the charts the salutation "Dear Sir?" A—It's not there.

Q—Is it true that "ir" or "sir" is a continuity of pen strokes? A—It is.

Q—Well now, you point out the "ir" of "sir" if it's on those charts. A—It's not there.

Figures Missing On Osborn Charts

Referring to the ransom amount, $50,000, Trendley said:

"I am positive there are no such figures on Mr. Osborn's charts."

Q—The next symbol on the ransom note here is an "S" with some lines through it to denote the dollar sign. Is that on the Osborn charts? A—It is not.

Neither did the charts indicate any letters contained in the word "ready," the witness said.

Q—See if there are any "Y's" on the charts. A—Yes. Several. Some are from the ransom writing and some from the Hauptmann "request' writing.

Q—Do you find any "Y" in the ransom notes that correspond with the "Y" in the request writings? A—I do not.

Again the ransom note was passed among the jurors.

Unusual "Ave" Left Out

Reilly asked the witness if the unusual "ave" and "dy" or the figures "50,000" from the ransom notes were used in Osborn's exhibits.

"They were not," said Trendley.

The witness pointed out the letter combination "ave" as in "have" was always a continuous line in the ransom notes.

He showed that where "dy" came together, as in "redy" for "ready" in the ransom notes the "d" and "y" were separate. The line between the letters was always broken.

Trendley said, in giving his opinion Hauptmann did not write the ransom notes, that he took into consideration various things which did not appear on the charts—such as "have," "50,000$" "redy" and the particular formation of the "y" in the word "redy."

The witness said the word "in" also was absent from the Osborn charts. So far, he said, the following has not appeared on the charts:

"Dear sir. Have 50,000$, redy in —"

Trendley also mentioned some of the peculiar "y's," the word "in" and 50,000, 25,000, and other numerals, which he said were not used in Osborn's chart.

He pointed out some peculiar "s's" and the word "bills" from the "nursery note"—the first message left after the kidnaping.

"Now I ask you," said Reilly, "are these 's's' indicated in Osborn's charts the same kind of 's's' that appear in the 'nursery' note?"

"They are not," replied Trendley.

Trendley and Reilly stood in front of the charts as the interrogation went on.

Word "Bills" Not on Exhibits

The word "bills" could not be found on the Osborn charts, Reilly also brought out.

The testimony indicated a strong defense contention that the state experts carefully hand-picked for the jury only the characters from the ransom notes and Hauptmann's writing which were similar, ignoring dissimilarities.

Trendley said there were whole words and lines of the nursery note from which not a single letter had been taken by Osborn for comparison with Hauptmann's writing. He seized one of these lines "Take 10,000 $ in 5$ bills."

Q—I indicate to you this word which begins with what appears to be a capital "A" in "after." Does such an "A" appear on the charts? A—It does not.

Trendley testified the expression "2-4-Is" from the kidnap missive is not represented on the charts, either.

Q—Am I correct in saying that no letters or symbols in the first four lines of the ransom note appear anywhere on Mr. Osborn's charts? A—You are.

Tells How Photos Distort Writing

Reilly walked close to the witness chair and said:

"What is known as the patter of the hand, Mr. Trendley, in your profession?"

"The method of the forms of the letters," answered the witness.

Q—Now, Mr. Trendley, is it possible to distort handwriting with the use of photography, making lines appear longer or shorter than they really are? A—Oh, yes, there's a lot of that stuff in photography.

Q—And can the shading of letters be changed through photography? A—Yes.

Q—Now, observe the word "we" in the nursery note and the "we" as it appears on Osborn's charts. Do they look the same? A—No.

As the witness testified, Reilly repeatedly passed the cellophane-wrapped ransom notes around among the jurors.

Shorten Lines by Camera

He also was very careful to see that the jury had ample time to study each example on the charts.

The testimony moved slowly. One of the jurors passed a box of cough drops around to his companions.

Trendley said it is not possible to change the pattern by retouching with pencil etching, but that lines may be made longer or shorter by use of the camera.

Reilly pointed to the word "we" in the ransom note and in the defendant's request wirings and passed the kidnap note back to the jury for their scrutiny.

Then he held up before their eyes a large chart bearing "we's" from Hauptmann's request writing.

Trendley was obscured behind the chart, and Assistant Attorney General Joseph A. Lanigan observed:

"Bring the witness out where we can see him. We want a glimpse of him now and then."

Q—(By Reilly) Do you find any of the letters in the word "will" on the Osborn charts? A—They do not appear on the chart.

The witness said the same was true of the word "inform."

Lindy and Bruno Follow Closely

Colonel Lindbergh sat about 15 feet from the witness chair and watched the demonstrations with keen interest. Next to him was Colonel Henry Breckinridge, his attorney and close friend, who seemed rather bored.

Hauptmann appeared as much interested as Lindbergh. He frequently leaned forward to get a better look.

Trendley said he had examined the handwriting of the dead Isador Fisch, from whom Hauptmann claimed he received the ransom money found in his garage.

The defense has intimated before that it might try to show that Fisch was the actual writer of the notes, and that he imitated the hand of Hauptmann.

The connection was not immediately brought out through Trendley, however.

Trendley then testified that the "Y" in the word "you" in one of the ransom notes had three separate strokes, the initial one, the downward, and the upward stroke.

Q—(Reilly) — You mean by initial stroke the belly of the "Y"? A—No.

Q—On the request writings the "Y" has the initial and downward strokes only? A—Yes.

Trendley said the word "were," written in the nursery note, obviously for "where," is highly significant. But, he added, it is not embodied in Osborn's charts. He characterized the kidnaper's "were" as "all one single movement."

Word After Word Found Missing

Word after word contained in the ransom note was sought on the Osborn charts to no avail.

The testimony was the slowest since the trial began.

Q—It it not a fact that you cannot find on Mr. Osborn's charts any letters, symbols or words contained in the first five lines of the nursery note? A—That is the case, sir.

Much time was lost searching through the charts, which occasionally fell to the floor with a clatter.

"Now take the word "the," said Reilly, "does the 'the' from line six of the nursery note appear on Osborn's charts?" "It does not," declared Trendley.

Q—Is there a difference between the 'the' in the ransom note and those shown on the charts? A—There is.

The state had attached a great deal of importance to alleged similarities between "the's" of the ransom notes and Hauptmann's writing. Sometimes they were spelled "hte."

Reilly impressively held up the charts before the jurors.

Q—Now, did you notice a peculiarity of the "Y" in "redy" and "money" in the ransom notes? A—Yes.

Q—Now, I show you this card, which I offer to have marked for identification, and ask you if the "y" shown in it is similar to the "y" in ready? A—Yes.

Assistant Attorney-General Lanigan objected to the admission of the card as evidence. He said:

"We don't know what that card is and how it is connected with the case. It might be the history of the world for all we know."

"Hardly on a postal card," Reilly answered, sarcastically.

Turning to the court he said:

"We intend to show merely that the characteristics of the 'y' in this postal card are similar to the 'y' in the ransom note. We will connect it up later."

A recess was taken at this point and defense counsel told reporters the card was a Christmas card sent to Hauptmann from Isador Fisch after going to Germany, where he died.

Don't Claim Fisch Did It

During the recess Reilly denied the defense planned by its handwriting experts to accuse Fisch of penning the ransom notes.

"We never contended Fisch wrote the notes or that he perpetrated the crime," he said. "I believe that he got the ransom money. We don't know who wrote the ransom notes.

"We are not here to prove who wrote the ransom notes, but to prove Hauptmann didn't write them."

The defense position on the handwriting, although not phrased in so many words, seemed to be to cast doubt on the theory that anyone already mentioned in the case could have written them.

It was also indicated that the defense through implication might try to convince the jury that Fisch had obtained the ransom money in any one of several ways.

Reilly resumed the questioning of Trendley with the remark:

"I now begin the second paragraph of the nursery note."

He asked Trendley if the words "we" and "warn" as they appeared in the nursery note were used by Osborn in his chart.

"They are not on the charts," said Trendley.

Q—The example of "we" which was used by Osborn could be read as "wee" or "one," couldn't it? A——es.

Q—There are a lot of unnecessary strokes aren't there? A—Yes.

Q—Now, take the set of pen strokes making up the line "we warn you for" in the ransom note. Does it strike you as unusual? A—Yes—Very.

Q—Do you find it in Mr. Osborn's chart? A—No. I do not.

Written by Left Hand

Reilly asked if, from his examination of the origina ransom note, Trendley thought it was a "free hand" or a "disguise."

"A disguise," said Trendley.

He expressed the opinion the note was written by the left hand.

Q—Is it not a fact the word "public" is written defferently than other words? A—Yes. There is evidence more care was used in writing the word "public" than other words. It obviously was written by the left hand.

At one point, Justice Trenchard arose and, leaning over the witness, peered intently at the nursery ransom note.

Reilly pointed to the word "or" in the note and asked Trendley if that word was on the state charts. The witness said it was not.

When Reilly and assistant Attorney General Lanigan engaged in a tilt over charts, Lanigan said:

"He has no charts of his own."

Reilly bristled and shot back:

"We don't need any charts. We'll use yours."

State Refuses to Identify Book

Reilly then asked Lanigan to identify a booklet containing photos of the ransom notes. The prosecution aide refused. It was not in evidence and Lanigan pointed out the defense was privileged to introduce its own exhibits.

"This is unheard of, Your Honor," Reilly said. "This is a book of pictures of the ransom notes, supplied to the defense by the state."

"Whose ransom notes?" interposed Lanigan.

"You know we have no ransom notes," Reilly retorted.

The defense attorney said he would proceed without the booklet but Justice Trenchard asked Lanigan to identify the book.

Lanigan did and Reilly agreed to hold the book himself and present the original of the nursery note to the jury.

Reilly, continuing, brought out that the word "notify" in subsequent ransom notes was not similar to that in the nursery message and that Hauptmann's writing of the word was different.

During most of the testimony on the nursery note, Charles S. Walton, Sr., foreman of the jury, held the original in his hand, following with his thumb word by word.

tion of the ransom notes and the 'request' writing of Hauptmann, are you able to give an opinion whether the defendant, Hauptmann, wrote the ransom notes," asked Reilly.

"I believe he did not," said Trendley, in a positive tone.

Before the trial convened today Attorney Reilly charged that important evidence about the kidnap ladder had been withheld.

He also told how seven defense witnesses have been threatened with "dire consequences" if they take the witness stand for Hauptmann.

The threats, he declared, were made by two men who said they were representing the State of New Jersey. He said:

"These men—just a couple of plug-uglies—went to the homes of seven of my witnesses and told them to stay out of the State of New Jersey if they knew what was good for them.

Adding that he knew the "plug uglies" did not come from Attorney General Wilentz, the burly defense attorney angrily continued:

"I have a pretty good idea who sent them around and I can promise the last of this outrage has not been heard."

It was reported that Judge Trenchard has asked Reilly to have the seven witnesses submit affidavits.

Included in the seven Reilly says were threatened, were three surprise witnesses he planned to call at today's sessions.

"I doubt whether they'll come to Flemington now," he said. "If I get them at all, I'll have to bring them over here secretly, and get them home in the same manner."

Reilly at the same time revealed he will call several additional alibi witnesses but hastily added to reporters:

"I won't give you their names because you can be sure they would never get here. Those plug-uglies would be after them right away."

Hits at Different Ladder Report

Reilly also said today he understood a police report on the structure of the "kidnap ladder" which might clear Bruno Hauptmann of the killing is in the possession of the state.

"I have been told that State experts made this report and turned it over to Governor Moore, when he was in office," Reilly stated.

"Hauptmann's counsel wants to know what was in that report. If it is favorable to our case, as we suspect it is, we shall make a demand that the content be placed in the court record."

Meanwhile, in New York, Samuel Streppone, 37, radio shop owner added himself to the list of Hauptmann "alibi witnesses" today with the declaration that Isidor Fisch had given into his keeping, for a few hours, a shoe box which Streppone believes contained Lindbergh ransom money.

Accompanied by "a fat man," Streppone claimed, the consumptive-looking Fisch came into his shop on May 20, 1933, and pulled out a roll of $10 gold notes to make a payment of $3 for having his radio repaired.

"I was suspicious of the money," said Streppone. "Gold had been recalled in March. But when I started to send one of the children out to change one of the bills Fisch said he would bring in the change the next day.

"Three days later he came back carrying a box about the size of a shoe box, wrapped in heavy paper and tied with heavy twine.

"It was about 2 p. m. He asked me to keep the box until he returned at night.

"I took it. It didn't weigh much. I believe the ransom money was in it. Fisch came back at 10 p. m. and took it away."

Streppone claimed his customer gave the name of Isidor Fisch and that he had recognized him as the Hauptmann "alibi man" through a newspaper photograph.

Adela Rogers St. Johns Says:

SPOTLIGHT NOW TURNS TO HAUPTMANN JURORS

EACH STUDIES PEN EXPERT WITH DIFFERENT IDEA

"FACES REVEAL THOUGHTS"

By ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 1—We are becoming more and more conscious of the jury in this courtroom.

There they sit, quietly, silently, the twelve men and women who in the end will cast the vote of life or death for Bruno Hauptmann.

Today, as never before, we realize the gigantic task before them and we watch them, trying to read something of what they think.

Violently contradictory evidence now is being put before them and they are making, mysteriously now, their voice as to whom they shall believe.

The charts bearing on one side the ransom notes, on the other the request writings of Bruno Hauptmann are on the wall before them once more and once more a handwriting expert is before them explaining, pointing, declaring.

But this time the testimony is different.

Weeks ago we had those same charts and we had Albert Osborn and Clark Sellers, explaining them. They said the writings on both sides of the chart were the writings of Bruno Hauptmann. If that is true, then Hauptmann is the Lindbergh kidnaper.

Today we have J. M. Trendley, who says that while the request writing were made by Hauptmann, the ransom notes were not written by him.

Who to Believe

Whom will they believe?

Never were two men more in contrast than Osborn and Trendley. They are as different, these two experts, as their opinions—and that means as different as yes and no.

Osborn looked like a college president, a large, white-haired man, excellently groomed, speaking cultured English, bearing himself with great dignity, sitting on the witness stand with his white head held high.

Trendley looks rather like a double for Ed Wynne. He stands behind the witness chair, falling over it, sort of clinging to it for support.

Osborn has had over 30 years of experience as a handwriting expert.

Trendley has had forty.

Osborn says yes.

Trendley says no.

What Do They Think

If the jury believes Osborn, they must convict Hauptmann, for nothing on earth can alter the damning facts that if Hauptmann wrote the note found in the nursery, Bruno Hauptmann was so vital a part of the Lindbergh kidnaping that nothing can save him from the extreme penalty.

Trendley says no, and if they believe him, one of the most important pieces of evidence in Attorney-General Wilentz's brilliant case against Hauptmann falls apart.

What are they thinking about, the 12 jurors? They can't believe them both, and upon their decision the Hauptmann case may rest.

How do these two men and their testimony impress the jury, which so soon must make its decision.

I try to read the effect of this testimony upon them—I stare and try to read.

Student of Jury

The attention of one juror is constant. He, Robert B. Cravatt, 25, is an educator. To him this testimony is vital.

Two seats away from him, George Voorhees, a farmer. You can come nearer to knowing what Mr. Voorhees thinks that you can know about any other juror. He gets excited, he leans forward, sometimes he whispers to Mrs. Brelsford, the plump, golden-haired housewife who sits beside him and smiles very often. She smiled a good deal when Hauptmann was on the stand. Now she looks tired, bored.

In the front row, little Mrs. Stockton, pert and pretty. Did she believe Lindbergh when he identified that voice? Has she become convinced by the dynamic Wilentz, by Reilly's soft, Irish manner or by Hauptmann when he laughed or when he looked pathetic?

The silent gray little men of the jury. Liscom Case, a carpenter, who watched every step of the ladder identification as though fascinated, who could understand all about chisels and planes. Charles Walton, a machinist, gets restless.

Mrs. Rosie Hill, Mrs. Verna Snyder, enormous women whose faces at first seem placid and soft, are now watching Trendley. Their faces are inscrutable.

And we must wait, as Hauptmann waits, to know what they have thought of it all.

'Death Try' Of Witness Is Probed

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 1—Mrs. Fannette Rivkin, reputed potential witness in the Hauptmann trial, was subjected to further questioning today on her bizarre story of having been bound, gagged and almost burned to death by a man with a guttural voice in her beauty parlor yesterday.

Previously, Mrs. Rivkin had declared she was prepared to testify Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, wife of the alleged Lindbergh baby slayer, frequently changed $10 bills for beauty treatments in her establishment.

Yesterday, she told police, she narrowly escaped death when the mysterious assailant fired the chair to which he had bound her.

"I'm still not satisfied with Mrs. Rivkin's story," observed Fire Marshal Brophy.

He said that two years ago, when she collected insurance on a similar blaze, she related alleged threats by persons who said they would loot her shop an dset it afire, adding:

"There are circumstances that are verypeculiar."

New Mooney Plea

Washington, Feb. 1 (INS)—Petition for rehearing of the case of Tom Mooney, California's labor prisoner, will be filed in the Supreme Court on Monday, John F. Finnerty, one of Mooney's lawyers, announced today.

Dies in Crash

Westmoreland, N. H., Feb. 1 (AP)—Clyde A. Forrest, 27, of Keene was killed and Armand Byron, 28, of Worcester, Mass., was injured when their trucks collided head on here today.

22 Rebels Slain

Mexico City, Feb. 1 (INS) — A rebel band of 22 led by Pedro Moreno was wiped out by federal troops today near Altzayanga in the state of Puebla.

Pen Expert

Pick your expert. This one, John M. Trendley of East St. Louis, Ill., now asserts that Bruno Richard Hauptmann did not write the Lindbergh ransom notes. State experts have sworn that the notes were Bruno's. Trendley was a defense witness today in the Flemington, N. J., trial. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

READY TO GIVE LIE TO "ALIBI" WITNESS

This girl, 20-year-old Esther Ellerson of the Bronx, may be called by the Hauptmann prosecution as a witness in rebuttal of testimony given by Elvert Carlstrom. The latter, furnishing an alibi for Bruno, told of visiting the Bronx because a friend of his, a girl named Esther, lived there. Miss Ellerson, the "Esther" in question, asserts that Carlstrom did not call upon her, on the "alibi" night, and had not been a friend of hers for some time past. # KIDNAP Unsolved by TRIAL

PUZZLE PARTS WON'T FIT

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN
International News Service Special Correspondent

Flemington, Feb. 1 — The story hasn't been told.

The trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the Lindbergh kidnaping went into its 23d sensational day today, but behind the black headlines, behind the millions of words and the scores of witnesses and the mob excitement—the case isn't solved.

No person sitting in this courtroom day after day believes what we are hearing is the solution to the kidnaping.

It may be a link, it may be the truth in part, Hauptmann may be guilty or innocent—but the whole truth hasn't been told. Pieces don't fit. The case is tangled with loose ends. There are too many angles.

And as the trial unfolds, like snippings of movie film pieced crazily together, the issues are infinitely more confused.

Today the whole case has reached a high point of confusion and conjecture, brought to a head by the four strange defense witnesses—the forgetful Swede, the Hungarian with the tattooed arm, the speakeasy proprietor with the lost dog story, and the woolly-haired attacker of women—who paraded before the strange, granite prisoner, all of them with alibis to save him.

Laugh It Off?

Not one of the four was an ideal witness. The credibility of each was open to attack.

But you cannot laugh off lightly dismiss four witnesses, three of whom put the accused man in a logical, natural spot for him to be on the night of the kidnaping, and one of whom puts two other men near the place where the state says Hauptmann was that night.

If you dismiss them, then dismiss Millard Whited, who said he saw Hauptmann on a vague day in February on the outskirts of the Lindbergh estate. Dismiss old Amandus Hochmuth who, shaking with age, said he saw Hauptmann drive by in a car with a ladder in it. Dismiss pretty Hildegarde Alexander, whose credibility the defense attacks. They were the prosecution mainstays.

Who do you believe? Now that the trial is in its second month, and millions of words of evidence have been heard, what is there for anyone to believe? Most important what does the jury believe?

At this point in the case—right now, today, this minute—you cannot pick 12 men and women at random and get all of them, or any two of them, to agree on Hauptmann's guilt or innocence, based on the evidence at the trial, and their reasons for the verdicts they would render if they were jurors. Then what about the actual 12 who are judging Hauptmann?

Try It Yourself

Go into the Union Hotel dining room at the close of court, as one reporter did, and ask a dozen people, one after the other:

"What do you think of Hauptmann on the stand?"

You'll get a dozen answers.

Stand in front of the Hunterdon county courthouse and stop 12 people as they pass. Ask each one:

"Do you think Hauptmann is guilty or innocent, and what is the reason for your answer?"

You'll get four or five different answers to the first part of the question, all of them qualified by "if this is true" or "if you can believe that," and a score of reasons.

Go to Times square, or Main street, Peoria, or Hollywood boulevard, or Nome, Alaska. See if you can get any "synthetic" jury to agree on a verdict.

ENIGMA BRUNO BOTH HATED AND PITIED

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 1—On the 23d day of his trial for the kidnap-killing of the Lindbergh baby, Bruno Richard Hauptmann is as much of an enigma as ever.

This is true despite the slow change which has come over his exterior since the first day he was brought into court and heard Attorney-General David T. Wilentz, speaking for the state, name him as the man who abducted and killed the Lindbergs' first-born son.

He is no longer sullen; he is grave. Yet there are times, many times, when he seems possessed of a buoyancy of spirit which evades analysis.

This puzzlement persists even when one remembers the pictures of the man as he was in that summer of 1932 when he swam and pitched horse shoes and played the mandolin on Hunters Island.

He has shown flashes of anger in court. He has been irritated. He has been amused, and his lips have broken in soft laughter. Once he burst into tears.

In many who have seen him he evokes pity; in others, hatred. Few retain a neutrality of mind; none, an indifference.

You can see him as the state pictures him—making the ladder, stealing in the window, killing the baby, writing the ransom notes and collecting $50,000 in a silent graveyard.

Or you can see him as the defense shows him—working hard as a carpenter, saving his money, playing the stock market and winning, finding a hoard of ransom notes and spending a few.

$300,000 LOSER

Asks 'Closure Rule

Harry Rosenberg of Worcester, who said he lost $300,000 when banks foreclosed on mortgages on property owned by him, urged today that such institutions be compelled to give mortgagers a 30-day notice before taking action.

Rosenberg told the legislative committee on state administration today that as a result of treatment accorded him by bankers he had contemplated suicide and even considered mass murder of bankers.

Creation of a board to protect property owners also was urged by the Worcester man.

Music Teacher Dies

Lowell, Feb 1—Mrs. Nano Gallagher Leahey, 57, supervisor of music in Providence public schools, died at her home here today after several months illness.

BRUNO EXPERT

At Theft Trial

Bridgeport, Ct., Feb. 1 (INS)—Scott E. Leslie, handwriting expert and a consultant in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, today appeared in Superior Court here. He was a state's witness in the trial of Patsy J. Di Pietro, 36, of Norwalk, charged with embezzling $2700 from his former ward, Frank Marrone.

Leslie testified signatures, allegedly Marrone's, had been forged.

CROONS "LOVE"

Before He Hangs

New Orleans, Feb 1 (AP)—A crooner to the last, Kenneth Neu, former night club entertainer convicted of murder, sang "Love in Bloom" in his cell just before he was executed on the gallows today.

Joking with the prison physician he compared himself with a parachute jumper, saying:

"It is not the falling that one fears, it is the sudden stop."

TAX PENALTY

Bill Wins Approval

The legislative committee on taxation today favorably reported a bill providing for a reduction in the interest and penalty rates on unpaid local taxes.

The bill provides for a reduction from six to five per cent for interest charges on overdue levies and calls for a reduction from two to one and one-half per cent on the penalty charge for long overdue taxes.

Juror Ill

By International News Service

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 1—As the afternoon session of the Hauptmann trial got under way today, juror number 11, Liscom B. Case, who has been suffering from heart strain, put smelling salts to his nose.

On the way back to court from the hotel where the jury had luncheon, Case had to be assisted up the courthouse steps.

MADDEN ILL

Sentence Delayed

When the time arived to sentence State Senator William F. Madden, of Jamaica Plain, in Federal court today, it was learned that he was ill at his Forest Hills street home.

A call to his home brought the statement that he was under a doctors care suffering from grippe and was too ill to appear in court.

Senator Madden was found guilty by a jury on January 22 of having forged and passed out CWA work cards.

BANDITS GET $1900 in Holdup

New Haven, Ct., Feb. 1 (AP)—Bandits today held up and robbed an employe of the United Smelting Company here and escaped in an automobile with $1900 in cash.

The holdup took place in front of the factory on Commerce street, as Max Flax, the employe, was about to enter the plant with the money he was bringing from a bank.

The two men seized him and snatched the money in an envelope.

Mayor Mansfield Sees $42 Tax Rate Here

The tax rate in Boston may reach $42 or more next year, Mayor Mansfield told the Roslindale Board of Trade at its annual meeting.

The present rate of $37.10 is already the highest of any city of its size in the civilized world, he said. He blamed previous administrations for the high rate.

Mayor Mansfield's only solution is recourse to a two per cent sales tax, as outlined in a bill now before the Legislature. Unless that tax goes through, he said, Boston home owners, who cannot pay the present rate, will have to pay one $7 higher.

TELLS of Pension PLAN

TOWNSEND AT HOUSE HEARING

By International News Service

Washington, Feb. 1—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the mild-mannered California physician who has intrigued millions with his $200-a-month old age pension plan, declined today to submit to questioning by members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

After briefly explaining his plan, Dr. Townsend said he had promised his physicians to avoid any "undue strain." He asked that a statistician in his organization be substituted for him next week.

The elderly physician warned he would become active on the political stump unless his plan is approved.

He assailed "brain trusters" and the "doctrine of scarcity."

"Every time a brain truster says this plan is crazy or cockeyed another 100,000 people sign petitions," he stated.

Without naming him, he criticized Relief Administrator Hopkins who had branded his plan as "cockeyed."

Dr. Townsend said 65 per cent of the people signing petitions are under 60. The plan provides a $200 a month pension for those over 60.

The aged, he conceded, are simply a means to put into effect a plan designed to bring universal prosperity.

2 GUILTY IN "OLEO" TAX

$50,000 FRAUD

A man and woman, both officers of the Fellsway Cheese Company, of North street, Boston, were found guilty today in Federal court of conspiracy to defraud the government of approximately $50,000 in taxes on oleomargarine.

They are Vincent Bruzzese of Cedar street, Stoneham, treasurer, and Miss Katherine McDevitt, secretary.

They also were found guilty of falsely packing oleomargarine as butter and conspiracy to violate the food and drug law.

The Fellsway Cheese Company, as a corporation, also was found guilty.

The defendants had waved a jury trial. Judge John A. Peters in his findings said that the evidence showed that Bruzzese was the leading figure of the Fellsway Cheese Company and that Miss McDevitt was aware of his plan to conspire against payment of the tax to the government.

Nichola J. Poto and Nicholas Costa, salesmen, and Orzzo Santoro, truckman, were found not guilty.

Sentence was suspended for a week on motion of counsel.

BALLOONS As Forecasters

Radio sounding-balloons and other devices will make accurate weather forecasting possible, Professor Charles F. Brooks, director of the Blue Hill Observatory of Harvard University, predicted today at exercises celebrating the 50th anniversary of the station.

"By the end of the next 50 years," said Professor Brooks, "I expect that radio-sounding balloons will be sent up several times daily from a hundred stations in the United tates, and that our knowledge of the atmosphere will be so greatly increased that forecasts will no longer be uncertain as 'unsettled, probably rain or snow.'"

11 KILLED ON Nazi Air Liner

ONE FROZEN TO DEATH IN N. E.

One death was reported in New England today as Boston struggled out of its below-zero atmosphere and the mercury began to rise.

With his eyes, face, hands and legs badly frost-bitten, a man believed to be Gino Corridi, formerly of Springfield, was found unconscious in Fremont street, that city, early today. He died later in Mercy Hospital.

The temperature at that time in Springfield was 20 below, while in Ware, 22 miles away, the mercury was 36 below.

In Medford, George F. Carroll, 26, of Warren street, Charlestown, was found frost-bitten and in a semi-conscious condition, lying on a snowbank in Boston avenue, near the Tufts College railroad station.

He was taken to Lawrence Memorial hospital and, after being thawed out, was locked up on a charge of drunkenness.

Greater Boston's lowest temperature reading today was 30 below at the Flynn farm in Billerica, while Bedford reported 25 to 30 below. Melrose, Winchester and Arlington Heights each reported 10 below.

Other colds spots included Malden and Waltham, —7; Watertown, —3; Somerville, —2; Newton 0; Cambridge, 2 above, and Brookline 4 above.

In Boston, from a low of 2 above today at 3 a. m., the mercury had soared to 19 by 11 o'clock. The weatherman promised that it will be "not so cold" tonight and will further moderate tomorrow.

The coldest February 1 on record in Boston was in 1920, when the mercury sank to 7 below.

BOY, 17, ADMITS
East Boston Holdup

Admission that he was the bandit who held up Jacob Isenstein in his East Boston pharmacy and robbed him of $10 at gunpoint two weeks ago was made today in East Boston court by John J. Boyle, Jr., 17, of East Eagle street, East Boston, son of a fireman.

Young Boyle was held in $5000 for the grand jury on a charge of robbery while armed. He said he had found the gun used in the holdup.

Isenstein sighted the youth yesterday, stepped into a telephone booth and called police.

Groundhog Takes Peek Tomorrow

Tomorrow is Candlemas or "groundhog" day.

The old legend has it that on this day the groundhog emerges from his hole.

If he sees his shadow, he scurries back for six weeks more of winter.

With Candlemas day coming this year in the midst of a prolonged cold spell, residents are hoping the sun hides its head while Mr. Groundhog is taking his look about.

Candlemas day takes its name from a rite of the early church.

It commemorates the presentation of the Christ-child in the temple and the purification of the mother.

The blessing of candles became a ceremony and in England the day meant the disappearance of all Christmas green.

Although the records show the groundhog has been a faulty prognosticator, there are many who will follow the progress of the sun tomorrow.

STRIKE On Auto Code LOOMS

GREEN WRATHY AT NRA MOVE

Washington, Feb. 1 — As the automobile code was extended with two important changes today a general automobile strike looms.

President Roosevelt, after a conference with NRA officials, but without consulting labor officials, acted to renew the code just a short time before it automatically expired.

The new provisions are:

Time and a half pay for overtime in excess of 48 hours a week.

The introduction of new car models in the fall rather than in January.

The advantages to labor, the President said, were considerable in the new provisos in the code.

More Pay Seen

First, those already working would obtain more pay for their efforts in the event of increased buying of automobiles.

Second, more men would be employed, and for a greater length of time, due to the early introduction of models. The spur to automobile buying should be tremendous, the President believes.

But President William Green of the American Federation of Labor protested hotly at the action of the federal officials in not consulting labor.

He said:

"That section of the President's order which provides for settlement of labor disputes was imposed upon labor without giving it an opportunity of offering an objection.

"The locals affiliated with the A. F. of L. have ceased to recognize the Automobile Labor Board, and will continue to do so."

Strong undercurrents of strike talk were heard at the Fisher Body Corporation's Lansing, Mich., plant. And an echo was heard at the Olds Motor Works which receives its bodies from the Fisher plant.

A group of workers in the Fisher plant have actually voted a strike against "intolerable conditions" although no specific date was set for the walkout.

Workers Vote Strike at Fisher Body Plant

By Associated Press

Detroit, Feb. 1—Strike talk was heard in one Michigan automobile factory today as the industry began operaaing under an extension of its NRA code as amended by President Roosevelt.

A group of workers in the Fisher Body Corporation's Lansing factory voted a strike against what they termed "intolerable working conditions."

The strike vote was an aftermath of a walkout by a small group of sanders in the Fisher plant at Lansing Thursday and the resultant shutdown of both that factory and the Olds Motor Works for a few hours.

McAdoo Glad League Court Lost

By Universal Service

New York, Feb. 1—Senator William G. McAdoo of California declared today he is confident the United States will maintain an independent position "in the state of the world today."

The senator returned from the Far East yesterday. Senator McAdoo wirelessed instructions from the Italian liner Rex that he be paired off in the Senate against entry into the League Court. He said:

"I am against American participation in any foreign entanglements, to use the words of Washington. I don't think we can contribute anything in the state of the world today, especially of Europe, and I don't think they can contribute anything to us in the way of peace.

"They are all armed to the teeth and getting more teeth in their armaments every day. They have fundamental difficulties and problems in which we have no conceivable part."

WRITES ABOUT

Outlook for 1935

About this time of the year the spook-doctors of London and Paris step forward with their predictions for the next 12 months.

We have our own spook-doctors. My good friend, John Mulholland, who knows about such things, has figured out that the city of New York alone spends about $25,000,000 a year on horoscopes and numerology and similar nonsense.

We are therefore not lacking in sorcerers of American parentage.

But they are probably so busy making money in the pursuit of their daily professional duties that they do not care to waste time on extra-curricular jobs, such as a forecast of the immediate future of the country which they honor with their presence.

Their European colleagues take themselves more seriously and consider it their duty to favor the whole of the community at least once a year with a sort of Presidential Message enumerating all the important events that will be front-page news between now and February of 1936.

Let me try and see whether I can do better than the crystal-gazers. Twelve months are a short space of time, and at the end of them you can tell me whether I have been right or wrong.

---

Here in America President Roosevelt will continue to rule pretty much as he has done so far—a sort of dictator by general acclamation.

There will be some opposition to many of his measures, but that opposition, lacking a leader or a genuine focal point, will be easily brushed aside, as both the Senate and the House will be on the side of the President.

England will indulge in an orgy of spending and will enjoy a short-lived era of unreal prosperity. At an unexpected but carefully pre-arranged moment, Ramsey MacDonald will be put on the skids and will find himself kicked upstairs into some harmless job.

---

Hitler will still be nominally in power. But he will have become entirely estranged from his former supporters who, by the middle of the year, will come to the conclusion that none of the ideals for which they fought has been realized.

---

In Italy conditions will remain about the same as they are now.

---

In France the radical elements will cause more and more unrest, because none of the scandals of the last year will have been solved.

HITLER GOES To Aid of Pola

Berlin, Feb. 1 (AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler personally today came to the aid of Pola Negri, Polish motion picture star, overruling the propaganda ministry's order prohibiting the actress from working in Germany on the grounds that she was suspected of having Jewish blood.

Hitler ruled that Miss Negri could enter Germany and act in a new German film in which she is to be starred.

LABATT ACCUSES MEISNER

By Universal Service

London, Ont., Feb. 1—In a trembling voice, John S. Labatt, wealthy brewer, from the witness stand here, accused David Meisner, Detroit bookmaker, as one of the three men who kidnaped him at the point of a pistol on August 14, near Sarnia, Ont.

Labatt described the car that forced his own car to the side of the road as he was driving to London, Ont. Two men jumped out and ran toward him, Labatt continued:

"Meisner ran crouching to my car and I could see him clearly—it was a bright sunny morning. Meisner pointed a gun at me and said: 'Stick 'em up—this is a holdup'."

Labatt said Meisner pulled him from the car and dictated a ransom note to the other man.

R. W. CHILD Rites Tomorrow

New York, Feb. 1—Funeral services for Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy and well-known attorney and author, will be held tomorrow at the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer.

KARPIS' GIRL Mother of Boy

Philadelphia, Feb. 1 (AP)—A son, weighing seven pounds, four ounces, was born today to 19-year-old Dolores Delaney, the girl Alvin Karpis, fugitive public enemy No. 1, left behind when he machined-gunned his way from an Atlantic City Hotel on January 17.

The Delaney girl and Winona Burdette, former radio entertainer, who was also abandoned when the two gunmen escaped, are held under $50,000 bail each for Florida authorities, where they are charged with harboring the desperadoes.

BIG DAM Placed in RIVER

BOULDER 'LAKE' BIGGEST YET

By Associated Press

Boulder Dam, Nevada, Feb. 1 — A three-million-pound gate sank gradually into the waters of the Colorado river today to form a new lake, the largest ever made by man.

It seemed a small stream that shoved its chocolate waters against the base of the largest dam in the world.

Yet three months from today, says John C. Page, one of the reclamation service engineers here, the lake will be 300 feet up against the 727 foot dam and extend back some 60 miles.

The time of the actual stopping of the river, for the first time in its three-million-year history, was actually 10 a. m. (Eastern standard time).

The process, however, started last night when a 50 by 50 foot steel gate, most massive ever constructed, started its movement down inch by inch.

3 Years to Fill

It will take three years for the mighty Colorado river to fill the reservoir this dam creates, extending 115 miles up the canyons of the Colorado and 35 miles up an adjacent river in Nevada, a lake that will be 11 times as large as man ever created hitherto.

To the people of the Imperial Valley, southern California, one of the garden spots of the world, it means that the danger of floods is past forever.

The $385,000,000 project not only provides flood control, but will generate electrical power for the Pacific southwest.

The most expensive part of the Boulder Dam project is that of connecting the lake with metropolitan centers of southern California to provide a water supply, embracing an expenditure of $220,000,000.

FARLEY TIME Clock Proposed

By Universal Service

Washington, Feb. 1—Postmaster General Farley should be made to punch a time clock, Representative Culkin (R) of New York told the House.

Representative Tabor (R) of New York was assailing Farley's news ticker when Culkin chimed in:

Mayor Pay Rejected By Lyons

Acting Mayor John W. Lyons today made public a letter in which he refused the offer of Congressman Mayor Richard M. Russell to turn over to him $200 of the $625 monthly salary of the mayor.

According to Acting Mayor Lyons, Congressman Russell, before his departure for Washington, suggested to him that the mayor's salary be divided three ways.

Under the proposal, Acting Mayor Lyons would receive $200 a month, Congressman Russell would retain a like amount, and the remainder of $225 would be turned over to Cambridge Board of Welfare.

This offer Acting Mayor Lyons verbally declined to accept. On the return of Congressman Russell to Cambridge for the funeral of Charles F. J. McCue, late purchasing agent, the offer was again transmitted to Acting Mayor Lyons—this time by letter.

Lyons again refused verbally and

BAN O. K. ON BANK WILLS IS COURT RULING

The Legislature has the right to prohibit banks, trust companies and other organizations and individuals, other than lawyers, from engagaing in such legal work as the drawing up of wills and trusts.

This decision was handed down today by the supreme judicial court in response to a question put to it by the last Legislature after that body had been petitioned to place such a curb on financial institutions.

The court, moreover, declared that the Legislature has no power to confer the privilege on banks. The court said:

"The relation of attorney to client, is pre-eminently confidential. In addition to adequate learning, it demands on the part of the attorney undivided allegiance, a conspicuous degree of faithfulness and disinterestedness, absolute integrity and utter renunciation of personal advantage, conflicting in any way, directly or indirectly, with the interests of the client."

INSURANCE PLAN DELAY IS PREDICTED

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 1—Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee said today that "there is not a chance in the world for Congress to pass the Administration's social security bill by mid-February, as Secretary of Labor Perkins has urged.

Harrison predicted changes in the program, noting that there was "a great diversity of opinion" among members of his committee, but he said that on the whole the measure would be approved.

One objection voiced by some members of Harrison's committee has been that the bill would "coerce" the states by permitting the federal Government to judge whether they were doing enough for themselves to warrant federal aid.

Secretary Perkins sees only "small, regular allowances to those in actual need" in prospect as the American old age pension system in an article in the current issue of The Rotarian.

She avers charging the cost of unemployment insurance to the employer, declaring that "added to the total sost of production" the expense would be negligible.

ICKES' CLOCK Haywire

Washington, Feb. 1 (US)—Secretary of the Interior Ickes' press conference took six hours—by the clock.

It was 3 o'clock when the conference began and 9 o'clock when it ended.

The conference wasn't that slow, but Ickes' electric timepiece was that fast. It suddenly went haywire and made the six hours in 18 minutes.

SCHOOL PLEA WON BY MALDEN GIRL

Marjorie LaVerde, 14, Vernal street, Everett, may attend school as the result of the activity of Miss Mary Berlanger, woman probation officer, of the Malden district court.

While her brothers and sisters have been attending school, Marjorie has been kept at home to care for her mother, Mrs. Genaro LaVerde, a semi-invalid as the result of a paralytic shock 22 years ago. This year Marjorie had missed half her school year.

To Judge Elbridge G. Davis, Marjorie confided that she wanted to go to school like other children. But, she said, she had to stay home and help with the housework.

Genaro LaVerde, the girl's father, argued that Marjorie wanted to go to school to avoid housework. Judge Davis then retorted that the child was to be sent to school at once. He put Genaro on probation.

DELAY ON HOLC FUNDS LOOMS

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 1—Administration officials were put on notice today by a House leader that some delay appeared in store for their bill to increase the capital of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

The warning was issued by Chairman O'Connor (D.) of New York of the rules committee. He said a number of members were "interested" in an investigation proposed into the HOLC.

The HOLC bill—which is expected to ask from $1,000,000,000 to $1,500,000,000 in new capital—has not been drafted.

"We've got to look into this negligence on the part of the HOLC employes," O'Connor said. "The whole thing has been a series of colossal blunders."

RELIEF Plan Stirs REVOLT

4880 MILLION BILL FOUGHT

By Universal Service

Washington, Feb. 1—While Republicans denounced government competition with private industry, outcroppings of Democratic revolt appeared in the Senate to plague the President's 4880 million dollar public works relief bill.

Senator Carter Glass (D) of Virginia, complained that "no one has told us the projects that are to be undertaken" by the funds provided in the bill, and added:

"Apparently it is impossible to get a breakdown of how the money is to be spent."

Chairman of the Senate appropriations committee in charge of the bill, he said, however, he will call that group together Saturday with a view to reporting the measure next week—with amendments.

In secret sessions, FERA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins said only about 20 million dollars of the former relief funds remain on hand, and this will last only 10 days. One solution, he suggested, would be to pass the 880 million dollar relief section of the bill separately.

Republican committee members, under pressure from organized labor, insisted that any public works program must include guarantees of prevailing wage scales on all projects.

This is directly opposed to the President's theory, as expressed in message to Congress. He said public works wages should be sufficiently below prevailing private wage scales to permit private industry to absorb unemployed from the government rolls.

WENZLER FOILS Bandit Attack

Police today were seeking information which would lead to the arrest of three bandits who fired three shots in an attempted holdup of Representative John H. Wenzler's tavern on East Second street, South Boston.

93,000 ON ERA FACE JOB LOSS HERE

Unless Congress appropriates funds with which to carry on ERA activities until the President's $4,000,000,000 relief program goes into effect, 93,000 Massachusetts ERA workers—with 200,000 dependents—face the loss of their jobs.

This was the warning sounded today by State ERA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch. He said:

"I can't set an exact date, but unless our funds are replenished, there will be few jobs after February 10.

"If there are any after that date, it will only be beacuse some local administrators have pinched and scraped to make the funds last a bit longer."

Rotch said that his last $2,000,000 allotment is almost exhausted, explaining that it costs an average of $5,500,000 a month to carry on ERA activities in the State.

June Risky For Bridals, Records Say

Beware of marrying in June—if you want to stay married.

Statistics, compiled by Norfolk County probate clerks and released at Dedham today, reveal that the couples who trip to the altar in that "moonlight and honeysuckle" month are first to hasten to the divorce courts. September is a close runner-up in this class.

March, for all it's come-in-like-a-lamb-go-out-like-a-lion reputation, is considered by the statistical experts as an ideal marrying month.

The first 10 years, the records show, continue to be the hardest for the parties of the first and second parts, but one couple, after 41 years of marriage, sought a divorce.

It may cheer couples married in 1904, 1903 and 1902 to know that statistics indicate these years to have been the most successful

SHIPYARDS ASKED TO AID ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 1—Copies of letters sent from Democratic headquarters in the fall of 1932 asking shipbuilders to contribute to the Roosevelt campaign fund to put "other than a pacifist in the White House" were introduced in evidence today at the Senate munitions committee hearing.

The letters bore the typed name of Arthur P. Homer, Washington marine architect, who yesterday was described variously as a paint salesman and a close friend of President Roosevelt.

He was said by a committee investigator to have once stated he was associated with the President in the lobster business.

SEARCH HALTED FOR BOYS IN BAY

Search for two boys reported afloat on an ice cake over Dorchester bay was halted today, in the absence of more authentic information, after two national guard fliers returned to the airport from a flight over the harbor.

At the same time, Major Clarence E. Hodge of the National Guard announced that he would confer with Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard to arrange for complete and quick co-operation with police in such cases.

Police were certain that the excitement that prevailed during the night was caused by the mistake of some excited person or because of a hoax.

FLETCHER RAPS Dole "Election Aid"

New York, Feb. 1 (AP)—Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, sees the administration's $4,880,000,000 relief appropriations as aiding President Roosevelt "not only in securing the legislation he desires, but in influencing the election of 1936."

The Republican chairman, in an address last night, said the relief measure was a step toward complete abdication of constitutional powers by Congress.

U.S. Children Safe in China Pirate Raid

By Associated Press

Hongkong, Feb. 1—Two Russian guards aboard the S. S. Tungchow, carrying 75 American, British and Scandinavian school children, were killed by pirates according to a report today to the China Navigation Company agents in Shanghai.

All the children were reported safe.

The British second engineer of the ship, which is under British registry, K. McDonald, was reported wounded. The casualties were presumed to have occurred during the battle for possession of the ship.

The British naval intelligence in Shanghai was advised that the vessel headed for Junk Bay, Hongkong, after its release and was due to arrive late tonight.

The China Navigation Company agents refused to divulge any information concerning the vessel's seizure, but asserted that all the passengers on board were unharmed.

Word of the steamer's safety came while British war vessels searched the China coastal waters in search of the craft, 36 hours overdue at Chefoo, its destination.

The children on board were returning to the foreign mission school at Chefoo after a seven-weeks' holiday.

The China Inland Mission station authorities at Shanghai said the majority of the children among the passengers were British subjects, but some are Americans.

Leigh was getting all the instructions from the doctor. He called across to his brother:

Six Pockets

SIX—count 'em—six pockets account for a good deal of this light beige diagonal wool suit's smartness.

A veritable parade of polished wooden buttons marches adown the jacket of the three-piece suit illustrated here. It is such a soft, light wool that it adds no clumsy weight under a winter topcoat.

(2) A [illegible] bid.

(3) [illegible] that South will rebid.

West opened the club King and upon receiving East's nine continued with a small one which East won with the Ace, after which Declarer was forced with a third round of club.

A low diamond was then [illegible] West ducking and Dummy's Jack holding the trick. [illegible] eight [illegible] East to [illegible] with the ten, Declarer [illegible] with the Queen.

The King and Ace of hearts were next run off and a third round of hearts gave Declarer another trump trick.

Needing only two more tricks, Declarer led the King of diamonds which West won with the Ace, after which a third diamond was led, East ruffing with the four.

East now [illegible] the King Jack and seven of trumps and Declarer the Ace [illegible] and six. The Jack of [illegible] was chosen by East which declarer permitted him to hold.

There was now no escape since East had to lead from his King-seven of trumps to Declarer's Ace-nine.

East's defense was poor. Realizing the possibility of some such [illegible] East should have played his [illegible] of clubs on the first lead in order to get his ruffs in and keep declarer long in trump instead of permitting South to make his small trumps [illegible]

Sensitive SKINS Can Use SOAP

Question: I am 26 years of age and have an extremely dry skin. While I use cream on my face, I cannot seem to acquire a thoroughly clean feeling without the use of soap once a day. ## Grace Moore Discloses Her Beauty Secret

By JULIET SHELBY

Grace Moore, who has broken box office records with her vivacious personality and beautiful voice in "One Night of Love," definitely says that much of screen success depends on keeping physically fit and preserving the contours of the body.

Particularly, the contours of face, neck and chest. No radiant screen beauty can afford to get a double chin or allow her neck to become wrinkled or gaunt.

SURVEY SHOWS 7 OUT OF 10 HAVE DEFECTIVE SIGHT
Good Eyesight Vanishing Expert Declares
CLEVELAND OHIO — A recently completed national survey shows that 7 out of 10 adults over fifty have defective eyesight according to the statement of Dr. Matthew Luckiesh, Director Lighting Research Laboratory, General Electric Company, Nela Park, Cleveland

TAKE HEED—

HAVE YOUR HOME LIGHTING Certified WITH A SIGHT-METER TEST

"Good eyesight vanishing!" This amazing statement might easily be ignored, were it not for the fact that an actual survey of records shows unmistakable evidence of its truth. Seven out of ten adults over fifty — one in every five school children — and two in every five college students — have defective vision.

GUARD YOUR SIGHT

These figures indicate beyond question the necessity for better care of the eyes — and for better lighting. Improper lighting is a cause of many eye troubles. Reading, studying, sewing, or working under lights too dim or too harsh often leads to eyestrain. Play safe. Save your sight. Have your home lighting certified and be sure that your eyes and your children's eyes are protected.

The first step in Certified Home Lighting is a SIGHTMETER test . . . The SIGHTMETER measures light as a thermometer measures heat. It will show you exactly where your lighting is unsafe for eyesight . . . The changes required to bring home lighting up to the standard for comfort and eye safety are usually very simple, most inexpensive.

Telephone HANcock 3300 for a SIGHTMETER survey.

There is no charge or obligation involved for this survey.

* * *

IMPORTANT — If your sight is defective at present, if you suffer from "eye" headaches, or similar symptoms, your eyes need more than better lighting. See an eye specialist.

3 SIMPLE RULES FOR SIGHT SAVING

1. Have enough light for the task at hand Sewing — for example — requires extra light.

* * *

2. Avoid shadow and glare. Light should be well shaded for eye safety.

* * *

3. Avoid contrast . . . Bright areas vs. dark areas in a room are bad.

Marriage Need Not Be a Trap

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ARE OUR young girls allowed too much freedom?

To bring up one small [illegible]—we'd like [illegible] in particular get more sleep. What has become of the old-fashioned "bedtime" and the belief in "beauty-sleep."

But I must be honest and admit that the results of too much regulation seem to me to be a good deal more deplorable than the results of too little.

For instance, a letter signed "Victim" has just come to me from a girl of 17 who is about to be married. It is a pitiful cry from the heart of a human being who [illegible] freedom [illegible].

"In two months [illegible] wed," writes me. "I am to be married to a young man [illegible] or [illegible] each other. But I [illegible] two [illegible].

"My [illegible] been strict and [illegible] I have never been a free entity for a single moment [illegible] I have [illegible] I am [illegible].

"Now I find [illegible] my fiance [illegible] freedom [illegible] he believes [illegible] to do [illegible].

"What shall I do? One of the reasons I wanted to marry was to have some life of [illegible] marriage just a terrible trap and a [illegible] escape [illegible]. Tell me before it is too late."

[illegible] cannot be bottled up [illegible] with no [illegible] of expression. If this poor child had been [illegible] liberal conditions [illegible] of a hundred girls today [illegible] she would never have developed such a case of jitters in connection with marrying a man with whom she is [illegible] in love.

A [illegible] with a tendency to be [illegible] wouldn't have much [illegible] I think once married to a modern girl accustomed to think and act for herself.

But since "Victim" is intelligent and personable [illegible] in love, I think decidedly that she would better go ahead with her marriage and do her best to [illegible] Marriage need never be a "trap" in this [illegible] country. That [illegible] fear.

CHAPTER 237

At the sound of Harry Underwood's voice calling, "Drop it, Lee Chow! Drop it, I tell you!" my father's hand shot out quickly and grasped my arm.

"[illegible]!" he commanded [illegible], but firmly. "Jim [illegible]"

"DEY FIGHTING DOOFL"

Katie had caught my arm as [illegible] with both hands.

I could not determine whether fright or a desire to guard me was impelling her. But when I glimpsed her excited eyes I knew that neither emotion was dominating her, although she, no doubt, was [illegible] influenced by both.

Patently her movie-soaked soul was thrilled by the adventurous [illegible] closed door.

"[illegible]?" she demanded [illegible] fighting door [illegible].

"Oh [illegible]" I answered [illegible] for I was in no mood to answer questions.

THE WARNING

"[illegible]" she persisted. "Me, I tink dot Lee Chow go dot vay dey do in movies—dose foreign men's in [illegible] around [illegible] knife [illegible] somebody [illegible] call dot? I [illegible]"

[illegible] is coming out [illegible] Katie [illegible] or running [illegible].

The door was indeed opening slowly, cautiously, and the next instant Jim slid around the edge of it [illegible].

"Vot happened? Vot matter?" Katie clutched his arm and shook him violently, as if she would hurry his rather slow thought processes by the attack.

"HE'S GONE BATTY!"

But as he spoke directly to me, paying no more attention to his wife than if she had been a piece of furniture, I knew that Katie was infuriated almost to the point of primitive biting and scratching.

"Your father says that you please will go to your room right [illegible] Mister [illegible] Katie [illegible].

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

Beginnings are always important. Particularly those social beginnings known as introductions.

Important for the person making the introduction, and for those acknowledging it. Because "getting off on the right foot" may have very pleasant, lasting effects. And vice versa.

The simple rules for an introduction are: Always speak first the name of the person especially honored. For instance, a man is presented to a woman, a younger woman to an older woman. Therefore one would say, "Mrs X, Mr Y." And "Mrs Z this is Miss Q."

The acknowledgment for these introductions and all others is simply "How do you do?" Try this response before your mirror. You'll be surprised how eloquent it can be. According to the way you say it it may be a formal response only, or an expression of the [illegible] pleasure.

Men shake hands when introduced to each other and women do or do not according to their personal feeling about the matter. For instance a woman in [illegible] as in our sketch, offer her hand if she feels so inclined [illegible] always take it.

The whole idea, you see, is to make people as comfortable as possible. Our [illegible] booklet, ETIQUETTE . . . the Well-Bred Way of Doing Things, tells the many details that make for good manners in public places and at home. There is also a chapter on the procedure in connection with engagements and weddings. To order the booklet use the coupon below.

Flaming "Nova" in Hercules Caused by Explosion 1200 Years Ago

By HIRAM PERCY MAXIM

(Copyright 1935, by King Features Syndicate)

Stars sometimes seem to us to come and go, but astronomers recognize a great significance in the so-called outburst of a star.

Recently we [illegible] that a star in Hercules [illegible] into flame, and stepped out from its seemingly insignificant status beyond [illegible] of the naked eye [illegible] of the forty brightest stars in all the sky.

Only a [illegible] little point of [illegible] that several [illegible] fairly large [illegible] sary in order to make a visible record on a photographic plate.

Astronomers [illegible] declare th[illegible] or collision [illegible] but [illegible] light wave [illegible] at the rate of 186,000 miles per [illegible] been 1200 years [illegible] news of th[illegible]

Of Enormous Size

An outburst of this sort is known as a [illegible] The particular one is [illegible] of its enormous size. Dr. Harlow Shapley of Harvard Ob[illegible] is quoted as saying [illegible] the most important [illegible] observed from Earth.

The largest [illegible] history was observed in 1572 by Tycho, before the days of the telescope. It equalled our sister planet Venus in brilliancy and was visible in the full daylight. In a single day it burst into full blaze, then faded slowly, in six months becoming invisible.

In 1604 Kepler saw another. It burst into a light that equalled that from Jupiter and remained visible to the unaided eye for 18 months. This means a brilliancy [illegible] times that of our Sun.

Over 50 of these novae have been recorded up to 1928, the majority in the present century. Those which have occurred in recent years have been observed with modern instruments. Nova [illegible] for 30 years appeared on photographs as a well behaved faint star of the 11th magnitude, which is 100 times fainter than the faintest star visible to the naked eye.

On the night of June 5, 1918, it was normal. Two nights later, on June 7, while visible to the naked eye, it was doubling its luminosity every hour. By the next night it was a first magnitude star exceeding great Antares in brilliancy.

Still a Mystery

Three days later it was the brightest of all fixed stars except Sirius. In three days it had increased its brilliance 100,000 times, or from four times the luminosity of our sun to 400,000 times.

In 18 days it had faded to one-fifth of its maximum brightness, and in eight months was again invisible to the naked eye.

Today, after 14 years, it is back where it was before the outburst, although its surface temperature is from two to three times higher than it was before the outburst.

These outbursts are not unusual. If we were on the watch day and night, we should probably find an average of about 20 a day. Being so common, there is probably one cause for all of them.

We do not know what this is as yet, but it has been suggested that the occurrence can be quite normal among stars, and that any star at any moment may burst.

This would be disconcerting to Earthians, were it not for the fact that our Earth's presence is evidence that our Sun had had its bursting adventure. Indeed, it is generally accepted as fact that, in the case of our Sun, this bursting process resulted in the present Solar System.

If this be so, may it not follow that the various outbursts which we see going on constantly in the sky are new Solar Systems in the making?

Lectures On Christian Science

Paul A. Harsch, C. S. B., of Toledo, O., a member of the board of lectureship of the Christian Science Mother Church, last night lectured in the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

He said in part:

"So long as the human sense of time shall endure, so long will the eternal Christ appear and reappear to human consciousness. By reason of His eternal and unchanging nature, God, good, must ever thus manifest Himself to men. This is the expression of divine law.

"From the Bible there is submitted to you a brief and familiar incident in support of our position that the Christ, even though unrecognized as such, has been ever present and ever available.

"Recall the experience of Abraham on Mount Moriah about to sacrifice his son, Isaac.

"He may still have entertained a somewhat superstitious dread of an avenging God to whom he must yield obedience according to ancient standards, no matter how inhuman the act required. Yet at exactly the right movement he was restrained by the ever-present Christ."

Miss Lucia C. Coulson, C. S. B., second reader in The Mother Church, introduced the lecturer.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The almost unanimous feeling of the editorial fraternity of this metropolis against the conduct of the Hauptmann trial is highly creditable to them and their newspapers.

They are pretty well agreed that the trial has been a three-ring circus so far as courtroom order and decorum are concerned and that the prosecutor's handling of the defendant went beyond the usual fashion in discourtesy, brutality, intimidation, and grandstand showmanship.

Robert E. Rogers

Protests against these conditions do credit to the writers of these protests and to their journals.

I can't help feeling however that the sense of surprise and astonishment noticeable in these protests is in itself surprising.

These writers seem to be saying:

"Can such things be and overcome us like a summer cloud without our special wonder?"

[illegible] disingenuous [illegible] singling out this particular trial for [illegible] when are after all characteristic [illegible] of the American bar and bench.

I [illegible] temperature went up as [illegible] when I read of the prosecutor's [illegible] and blackguarding of the [illegible] occur to me to make a song [illegible] of it simply because I have long [illegible] for granted that such is the [illegible] American courtroom tradition in every major trial.

I have [illegible] trials—in one instance a [illegible] England.

In [illegible] murder trials in Massachusetts [illegible]

But [illegible] conduct of the attorneys [illegible] any better.

Disgraceful Convention

Some of the passages in the New Jersey affair as I read them [illegible] too unpleasantly like some of the cross examination which the defendants [illegible] in the [illegible]-Faber case out at Dedham last [illegible] to submit to.

The [illegible] that lawyers must be [illegible] because witnesses are [illegible] and things has [illegible] disgraceful convention.

Some day I should like to see a presiding judge in an important civil or criminal case run the risk, even, of a new trial by holding counsel on both sides up to the highest and severest standards of decent speech, manners and conduct toward the witnesses on the stand.

I do not expect to live long [illegible] of magistrate or judge enough to see it. Such a course on the [illegible] of cruel and un- would be even more useful than usual punishments, in defiance of the Constitution, which seems to be the favorite sport of our magistrates today.

With Governor Curley busily conferring with heads of various departments in Washington today, it was expected that, among other matters, the question of the Boston postmastership would be definitely settled.

Just a Robin

Slightly out of season as it is, no less a personage than Colonel Charles R. "Break It Up" Apted of Harvard saw a robin.

That is to say he is sure he saw a robin. It was in one of Cambridge's historic old elms in the Harvard yard, near Harvard Hall.

Naturally the colonel, who is commander-in-chief of the Harvard police, claims the honor of calling the first robin of the season.

To prove his own conviction he swapped his navy blue ski cap with the cute little bow in front for a green felt fedora.

Skeptical Harvard ornithologists are investigating.

TOP O' THE WORLD

When you're feeling well, you're usually happy. Life is at its best. But when you're sick and blue, days lose their zest. You lack enthusiasm.

Common constipation, due to insufficient "bulk" in meals, is an enemy of happy living. It frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Correct it by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a natural food for normal persons. It furnishes generous "bulk" to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN also provides vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this gentle food safer than risking patent medicines? Unlike cathartics, it remains effective with continued use. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. Sold by all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Roll Call of Red Sox Managers

THE HUMAN SHEEPRUNS of the North Station were alive with hurrying travelers this morning, folk who tracked puddles, wiped moist noses and breathed forked jets of vapor.

Austen Lake

At an onyx lunch bar, a middle-aged man, thickset and gray, gulped the last of his malted milk, scooped up his change and turned to go.

"Bill Carrigan, aincha?" inquired the white-coated flunky, sopping the milk puddles where the man had rested his glass.

"Yeh," said the man, with a quizzical stare.

"Thought so," mused the waiter. "Used to see you when you managed the Red Sox."

"Yeh," said Bill again, turning to lose himself in the passing foot traffic.

Always that way, was Bill. Never a lover of glamour. A hunter of quiet, back-country solitude, who fled baseball at the height of his popularity, came back briefly and fled again.

* * *

Baseball's Sphinx

I USED TO STUDY CARRIGAN in the days when he came back grudgingly to manage Bob Quinn's Red Sox. But I never managed to measure the elusive, hidden myst[illegible] of the man behind that grim, square mask from whic[illegible] examining hazel eyes, like tiny windows in the face of [illegible].

He was friendly in a grave, guarded [illegible] a heavy good humor of a patented sort.

I suspect that through his three years under Bob Quinn, he tolerated baseball as sort of penance for the $25,000 it netted him each season.

He had said, when he came back, "Well, I will do my best, but I will not worry." And, in the midst of his stumble-footed athletes, who lost the ball down their pants and mixed their feet, he sat as unmoved as a bronze book-end.

And finally when the urge to stay with his children, his Down East cronies and his prize chickens welled up in his being, he quit over Quinn's protest and went back to being a country squire.

* * *

Sage or Bumpkin?

OTHER MEN WOULD have sawed off their toes to manage the Red Sox. To win the salary, to be fawned on by the crowd, to have their names in black headlines they would have licked a path up Commonwealth avenue with their tongues.

But still Bill tossed it all off like the rinds and crusts of a picnic lunch and hied into the mists of oblivion.

He did not need money. He resented attention. And all that he cared for was his family, a stroll down Lewiston's streets, the smell of the woods, the clatter of his henyard and the homely chores of a rural life.

What dreams he had, what visions he fashioned, what ambitions he nursed, we who rode on the Red Sox shirt tail never learned.

I wish I knew!

Either Bill was a rustic romantic, with a rich treasure-store of earthly philosophy, who liked to brood silently on cosmic problems and preferred to turn the beam of his light inward, or else he was a mental vacuum, who dreamed in an intellectual fog and distrusted the sound of his own ideas.

I prefer to think of him in the former light. He had too complete a grip on the rowdy types, like the late Ed Morris, Bill Rogell and Eddie Connolly, who always said "Yes, sir" and "By your leave" in Bill's presence, to be anything else.

I wish I knew!

* * *

The Sox Parade

IN 14 YEARS AS A SPORTS MIRROR, I have watched eight Red Sox managers come and go, beginning with Frank Chance, the dour foreman whose blasphemes were, to my ear, the most eloquent contributions to profane literature that I have ever heard. Possibly excepting Judge Landis, who was a creative artist in polysyllable cusses.

Lee Fohl was a lonely man who shrieked inwardly, and between games sat with his mastiff's jowls resting on his shoulders, the picture of aloof suspicion.

To strange reporters his attitude, in a querulous voice, was "God, keep my patience" and his policy in answering questions was to ask another back again.

But one night, when we were sitting alone, the floodgates of his loneliness opened and he talked as a man starving for companionship.

And then I discovered that his outer crust was a defensive armor to hide the man who bled and sobbed beneath. The late Miller Huggins of the Yankees was like that, too.

* * *

The Pipe Dreamer

THEN CARRIGAN, and afterward Heinie Wagner, a stolid man who tramped around the scene like a papa-bear, obtuse and blundering, and because he was conscious of his own inefficiency resented any constructive suggestion.

In the evenings he would don a brocaded dressing gown and sit sucking a pipe in a vague dream. It was this habit that made Bob Quinn say:

"I'll never hire another pipe smoker for a manager."

Then Shono Collins, a wistful, humorous man who played big brother to his cub types and, who finally in a fit of frayed nerves, jumped overboard and swam home before his sanity gave way.

He did his best with what he had and took the job so to heart that he narrowly missed the chuckle academy.

And Marty McManus, who was a stop-gap manager and never had a chance. And Bucky Harris, the old colliery slate picker who shed his fighting instinct as he grew a parlor complex and gradually became too refined for his own good.

But a decent, earnest and baseball-wise man underneath his tuxedo manner, who has gone back to the scene of his early beginnings, where I wish him well.

And finally Joe Cronin, whom I am saving for a rainy day. Still, I wish I knew about Carrigan!

He Can Smile

Bill Carrigan could smile— until he saw those 1929 Red Sox.

BILL BONTHRON FLYING

Burton Picks Him Over Cunningham

1000 in 2:18

RECENT TRIAL WITH HEAVY TOGS ON

By Lewis Burton
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Feb. 1—There is a tendency to make Glenn Cunningham, the foremost track benedict, a favorite in the mile race at the Millrose A. A. games in the Garden Saturday, but your correspondent demurs.

Facts bearing on the condition of Bill Bonthron, who ended training in a whistling wind atop a 16-story building, have come to light and leave the strong impression that the ex-Princeton star is in amazing condition.

[illegible] After three weeks of [illegible] [illegible] Bonthron [illegible] down the homestretch like a shell out of a howitzer.

NEW RECORD?

In his most recent [illegible] Bonthron [illegible] the full 1,000 yards of a 1000 [illegible] records.

His time for the entire distance was 2:18, which you might say is lowbright every going when you consider he wore heavy clothing to prevent his [illegible] from freezing.

Running on the tin-lap Warrenoker track, high off the street where the chill blasts have no end he has developed speed and wind to such a point that some expert observers believe he is better than ever.

This might presage a record race or something close to it. Bonthron doesn't need a race under his belt. The great closing drive is there.

Cunningham, holder of the world indoor record of 4 minutes 6.7 seconds, will have to be in condition to match that time or come exceedingly close to it, if he is to outspeed Bonthron.

Neither Gene Venzke nor Frichy De Sarde has a sprint to match the one Bonthron has prepared.

"What are you talking about?" he exclaimed upon inquiry, "such a thing never happened to Sam Langford!"

The negro battler, now blind, fought and licked the best of them, including Jack Johnson and Harry Wills.

With the count of "nine" on him, the "Tar Baby" is still in there trying.

Goaler Ready Out Of B. C. Lineup

Tim Ready, ace goal-tender on the undefeated Boston College hockey team, will not play for the Eagles tonight against the Brae Burn Country Club sextet, Coach Snooks Kelley announced today.

The informal nature of the game with the clubmen, which is to be the feature of a winter carnival at the Newton Club, and the painful injuries which Tim sustained against B. U. last Tuesday determined the B. C. mentor's action.

He received several bumps on the head, a deep gash on his forehead, a badly bruised and swollen right eye and was knocked out for ten minutes, yet finished the game.

Joe Zybell, who has been forced to play a rather insignificant part as Ready's alternate, will guard the Eagle net.

Johnny Garrison, Ding Palmer and other Brae Burn stars will toss plenty of rubber at Zybell tonight.

WORKLESS QUINT THAT'S CHELSEA

WINS WITHOUT PRACTICE

By Bill Connell

The Workless Wonders well might be used as a title for the Chelsea high basketball team, the champion five that goes weeks on end without a practice session.

"A stiff schedule gives boys all the work they can stand without going stale," says Coach Bill Kennelly, builder of title winning teams at Chelsea.

And Coach Bill practises what he preaches. Chelsea had its first workout in three weeks, Wednesday afternoon. The squad may not have another drill for weeks.

It has a hard game with Arlington invading Chelsea High tonight and other strenuous contests scheduled.

SPEED

The Tech tourney and possibly top honors in that event lie ahead, if the team holds its present form. Hence the emphasis on easy work, to avoid a slump.

[illegible] Nechtem and Manny Abrams [illegible] to hold forward berths [illegible] Al Perkins at center. Jack [illegible] Uchenick guards. The [illegible] two are only 5-5 tall but [illegible] for lack of height by [illegible] common to guards.

[illegible] for Nechtem, [illegible] to replace Noe [illegible] the team [illegible] though he's missed [illegible]

Nathan "Sonny" Schwartz, forward, Benny Mugford and Bill Murray, guards, complete the first team. On comparative scores Chelsea appears the strongest team in the eastern part of the state. It must down many strong teams before officially taking top rung.

DRAW WELL

A prosperous as well as winning team is Chelsea. The smallest home crowd has been 600, and many games have drawn far more customers than could be accommodated.

If a spacious arena were available, it's likely that more than [illegible]00 fans would attend the major games.

That's big league sports, and betters most small colleges' grid attendance marks. And as long as Coach Kennelly continues his brilliant court teaching, Chelsea will continue to win and pack them in.

'Almost Frozen to Death —This Was in Summer!"

Narrow Escape for a Delivery Man

By FLOYD GIBBONS.

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, boys and girls, here we are again with a hot adventure—that is the story is hot but the adventure is pretty doggone cold, if you ask me and it's freezing cold if you ask Joseph Higgins of 23 Pilling street, Brooklyn, N. Y. because you see, Joe nearly froze to death and that's not so hot. Joe doesn't like to talk about it so his wife, Mrs. Joseph Higgins, gets the ten spot and her name on the Adventure Club's roll of honor.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Now, if Joe had nearly froze to death out in Little America with Byrd or even right at home in winter when the blizzards were blizzing—well, maybe he wouldn't have made the Adventure Page, but boy, oh, boy, when you nearly freeze to death in the middle of summer, right out in the broiling streets—that's adventure.

To be exact, Mrs. Higgins places the date as the 17th of June in the Year of our Lord, 1931 [illegible] place before the store of Mr. Louis Fried at 2957 W[illegible] street, Coney Island.

The scene opens on a sizzling [illegible] and the other boys and girls were roaring for more ice cream [illegible] like Joe delivering the goods. You see Joe drove an ice cream delivery truck then and still does—for a [illegible] the retailers.

Now those big ice cream trucks as you probably know are nothing more or less than rolling refrigerators. They keep them freezing cold with "dry ice" which is colder and a [illegible] more dangerous than the wet kind.

Well sir, Joe had been working his head off that day and when he got to Fried's store the truck was pretty near empty. He got an order from Fried and went out to his truck to fill it. As he climbed into the rear door he put on the safety catch—which is supposed to keep the door open—and entered the freezing interior. He was just reaching for a container when—whang'—that big heavily insulated door slammed shut and Joe was a prisoner.

BANG!
TOSSED THE CANS AROUND BUT NO ONE HEARD

Now Joe was no stranger to dry ice. He knew all about it and he knew that he didn't have a chance for his life unless [illegible] out of there right away so he started in to do his best. He [illegible] and banged the [illegible] containers against the walls but [illegible] as well have been [illegible] underground for all the effect [illegible] on the passersby.

Those thick walls of the ice cream truck were air tight and sound proof and he didn't have a chance to attract anyone's attention. Joe sat down and in that bitter cold tried to collect his thoughts. He felt his entire body slowly going numb and to his surprise, according to Mrs. Higgins, the sensation was not as unpleasant as he thought it would be.

You know, boys and girls, they say that one thing to fear when in danger of freezing to death is sleep. Intense cold brings on a feeling of drowsiness that Arctic [illegible] the beginning of the end. When one of their numbers [illegible] be left alone to sleep [illegible]—anything to keep him awake and the blood circulating [illegible] that sleep means death.

Joe knew all this and [illegible] kicked himself savagely and [illegible] against the sides of the truck [illegible] nature gives all her children [illegible] sank to the floor exhausted. He [illegible] afterwards, just sleepy [illegible] rest. His mind told him that if he went to sleep [illegible] of death but he was just too sleepy to worry [illegible] rolled over, closed his eyes and went to sleep.

■ ■ ■ ■

Well sir, out in the street merry-makers, sublimely unconscious of the tragedy that was happening so close to them, trotted gaily past the truck. A group of boys passed and one of them playfully suggested pinching some ice cream. The boy actually had his hand on the handle of the truck door when one of the others warned him away.

Joe's gurdian angel must have been working on that boy's mind only to be turned away, but guardian angels are not turned away that easily. Joe's must have made another try because one of the boys stopped suddenly in front of Fried's store.

"Come on, kids," he said, "if you want ice cream that bad I'll treat to cones."

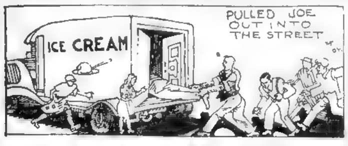
The kids needed no [illegible] and they trooped into the store and called loudly for [illegible]. And here comes the part [illegible] so strange when we meet up with coincidences like it in fiction.

You see, boys and [illegible] the proprietor of the store, Mr. Fried would perhaps never have given a thought to the driver of the truck if he hadn't just sold his last bit of ice cream.



ICE CREAM
PULLED JOE OUT INTO THE STREET

And he may not have thought of that, until too late, if the boys hadn't made him examine his containers. He looked and finding no cream went to look for the driver who had just taken his order. The truck was standing there but there was no sign of its driver.

Mr. Fried looked up and down the street and then Joe's guardian angel went to work on him and the store owner opened the rear door of the truck.

As that blast of ice cold air struck Mr. Fried he saw at a glance what had happened. He pulled Joe out into the street and saw to his horror that the driver was literally frozen stiff. An ambulance careened into the street and in a few minutes the doctors were working over Joe with a pulmotor.

They worked over him for an hour before a faint spark of life rewarded them, but he did live and in a few weeks was back on the job driving his ice cream truck and he's still driving it—in Coney Island!

■ ■ ■ ■

Well, that's about all for today, boys and girls, but I want to ask Mrs. Higgins to do one more little thing for me and that is to please endorse that check for 10 bucks that I am sending her and spend the money any way she likes. And all the rest of you adventurers can do the same thing on one of my checks, by just sending in your yarn and if I print it—the job is yours.

Be on hand for the club's next yarn tomorrow! It's about moments of deadly peril in midair.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWERS

Who Said It?

"Cowards Die Many Times Before Their Death."

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, the sophisticated Broadwayite of the Elizabethan Era, wrote that, adding, "A brave man dies but once." A contrary note is by Earl of Rochester: "All men would be cowards if they durst."

Concerning suicide, Ovid said: "To wish for death is a coward's part." And the Greek philosopher, Aristotle, said: "To die, and thus avoid poverty or love, or anything painful, is not the part of a brave man, but rather of a coward; for it is cowardice to avoid trouble, and the suicide does not undergo death because it is honorable, but in order to avoid evil."

Marshall Stays in Films

Long Term Contract

"Accent On Youth" to Follow "Morning, Noon and Night"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Feb. 1—Gilbert Miller's persuasive voice didn't register with Herbert Marshall. Bart remains in Hollywood with Paramount on a long-term contract. Well, to be original, what's Broadway's loss is our gain. Sylvia Sidney ought to thank her stars that Marshall is remaining in Hollywood, for he is to be teamed with her in two pictures.

Nancy Carroll Stars In "Jealousy"

By JOYCE DANA

The green-eyed monster gets in his deadly work in "Jealousy," which provides a companion picture for "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," at the Paramount and Fenway.

"Lives of a Bengal Lancer," with its triumvirate of hard-riding heroes, Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone and Richard Cromwell, is one of the season's best and most stirring pictures.

The rugged story of the men who guard the dangerous northwest borders of India for the glory of the British Empire is [illegible] with red-blooded adventure, and in addition to the [illegible] and one musketeers who face death and [illegible] the leading roles, there is the splendid support of such [illegible] as Sir Guy Standing, C. # TRADERS Seen Less GLOOMY

BUYING ORDERS STILL SMALL

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

Wall Street is giving the market the benefit of the doubt to see if the present recovery can get anywhere. There wasn't much snap to yesterday's rally and the close saw few changes of importance.

Sentiment may be a little less gloomy than it was a few days ago, but speculators are still far from the frame of mind which brings buying orders. A little more advance and activity might change this.

There is more of an undercurrent of inflation around now than in some time.

The reason is that many people are giving deep thought to the statement in Congress a couple of days ago that there isn't much difference in printing money than bonds now, considering the size of the Federal debt and the growing deficit.

The runup in Amerada to a new high raised speculation whether this reflected the market attitude of a prominent investment group that pretty well controls the company . . . There's quite a bit of short covering in the rails.

The Bethlehem Steel board meeting was in line with expectations, but disappointing at that.

For the corporation made money in the last quarter, in decided contrast with U. S. Steel's big loss, and might have paid a few pennies on the preferred for sentiment's sake.

It goes to show that the general uncertainty is prevalent in the steel industry also . . . The earnings report attracted favorable comment, and promises things when conditions become stabilized.

World Court

Forbes Sees Return to Americanism

By B. C. FORBES

Which Washington incident, think you, is causing the greatest amount of discussion among responsible men of affairs?

Of all the countless events which occur with whirlwind rapidity at our seat of government, the one which is regarded as uniquely significant is the Senate vote against having the United States become a member of the (League of Nations) World Court.

Why?

Because this is the first time Congress has refused to jump at the crack of the Presidential whip.

This column has told lately of multiplying symptoms that people have had a surfeit of un-American experimentation by Washington and that sentiment is now veering towards a return to Americanism, a return toward normalcy, a return towards tranquility. At least some business men interpret the Senate's rejection of World Court membership as a sign that Congress from now on will not abdicate, that our law-makers will not hand over to the executive branch all the duties and responsibilities conferred upon it by the Constitution.

B. C. Forbes

* * *

Note, also, what has happened this week in the Senate regarding the President's request that he be allowed almost $5,000,000,000 to spend as he might see fit. The House, 'tis true, promptly acquiesced. But the Senate has been insisting that it be furnished at least some idea of how this colossal sum is likely to be used.

This is interpreted in certain business circles as a second manifestation that the Senate means to resume functioning and refuses to jump meekly, silently, promptly at the crack of the executive whip.

"On the other hand, there are in the business and industrial and financial worlds men who question the desirability of anything being done by the Senate or by anybody to lessen President Roosevelt's untrammeled power. They would rather have the destinies of the nation lodged in his hands than in the hands of the many-men-many-minds constituting the present Congress. They feel that, in order to achieve his main objectives, the President must be clothed with extraordinary authority.

* * *

"If not Roosevelt, what?" is daily asked.

Answers vary widely.

One school of opinion is that if Congress recalls much of the power it has transferred to the President, the latter would find himself obligated to attempt fewer experiments, fewer innovations, fewer staggering expenditures, and that this would contribute to modifying uncertainty, would make for a larger measure of tranquility, would smooth the pathway to normalcy, to stability, to prosperity.

Another school of opinion is that if President Roosevelt be not given an entirely free hand and if, consequently, his plans were to be frustrated, then the country would face an ominous outbreak of radicalism, making possible the advent of such demagogic figures as Huey Long, Upton Sinclair, Dr. Townsend.

* * *

Every thoughtful citizen will watch events at Washington with peculiar interest.

One reader, A. R. Jones, Jr., after commending this column for emphasizing the enormity of our present and prospective taxes, writes:

"I checked up and found that for last year our company paid taxes equal to 50 per cent of our direct labor payroll. Had our taxes been only half as large, we could have increased wage payments 25 per cent and come out the same. And last year's taxes will prove the smallest for years to come."

He voices this sensible conclusion: "The American worker's living standard is being held down by the tax load."

* * *

Bank shares are no longer owned by only the rich. At the beginning of 1921, 15 New York institutions had only 19,401 stockholders; today they have 390,586. One form of wealth-sharing?

DISCUSSES Aims OF NEW Deal

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics New York University.

New York, Feb. 1—"We plan these uses in the light of what we want to be, of what we want to accomplish as a people."

These are the words of President Roosevelt, used in his recent message to Congress on the national resources board report. They deserve careful study, for in them we find the gist of the new deal. (The Johnsons and Ickes and the Moleys and Tugwells may come and go, but the new deal's responsible leader is the President.)

The first point to note is that "we" as a nation are supposed to be doing the "planning." Actually, however, a board is appointed by the President. It submits its ideas. The President accepts them and transmits them to Congress with a request for $4,800,000,000 (billions, not millions). The House passes the appropriation in a few minutes.

He states that this will affect "the future of the American family everywhere." But he admits "the physical impossibility of surveying, weighing and testing each and every project" which is involved in this huge expenditure.

I ask, is this a "plan?" Are you and I and our neighbors participating in it?

All it is is a vague, general scheme of doing things to forests, rivers, etc. And it is proposed by a few idealistic individuals, without any national participation. It is "planning" for the nation, not by the nation.

The second point is most important. What is the basis of the "plan?" The President tells us—it is "what we want to be." It is based on "wish thinking."

We want "abundant life," so we "plan" to spend four billion dollars without being able to "survey, weigh or test" the projects!

To paraphrase the old saying, "if wishes were horsepower, beggars might enjoy free electricity."

Then there is a very significant third point. This alleged "plan" is fatally mixed up with current emergency. It is supposed to be a long-run scheme to deal with "evils that will attend our children"—it is to "affect the future of every American family." But at the same time it is to be rushed through because of a "current emergency" and an "immediate crisis of unemployment!"

Now these two purposes simply cannot be mixed. We can do things to give immediate relief to needy persons on a temporary basis and with little regard for cost. But we cannot wisely plan for the distant future of the nation in that way. Both long run "plan" and immediate relief measures are hurt by trying to combine them.

This notion that sweeping "reforms" can be mixed with immediate business recovery has already done us great harm.

Now comes the menacing plea that we must not "survey, weigh, and test" this four billion dollar spending scheme for future generations, nor provide permanent administrative machinery—because that "would retard the immediate employment objective!"

The President has learned something. At least he now says that it is an error to think that we have conquered nature, that there are "immutable laws" of nature, and that man must learn to work in harmony with them.

But he still labors under the delusion that "the laws of natural economics (!) have broken down." (I suppose he means the law of supply and demand.) Above all, he still has the idea that we can make mass adjustments to nature. He talks of a "national economics." This means regimentation.

U. S. MOVING Slowly ON AIR MAIL Plans

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The United States Senate seems determined to move slowly and surely in matters pertaining to aviation. The grim air mail fiasco of 1934, one suspects, is entitled to the credit for such conservatism.

Senator O'Mahoney's measure to extend existing air mail laws while the President's message on aviation is considered was quickly approved. As the former Chelsea boy, who went West to political success, says the air mail situation is an integral part of the entire aviation problem. Adoption of his measure by the Senate provides a breathing spell in which the message may be studied.

* * *

Joseph C. O'Mahoney

Holders of aviation shares, after a year in which they sometimes wondered if fortune had not been sought marketwise in a too spectacular manner, are distinctly heartened. Transport shares particularly act better than in months and there is real hope that the growth of the most colorful of modern industries is not to be stunted. While developments may not be sufficiently rapid to insure sparkling moves in aviation shares there is comforting consolation in the thought political interest will be temperate, if, indeed, it is not friendly.

* * *

Notebook: Incidentally Senator O'Mahoney is not a novice in post-office affairs . . . Having served as first assistant Postmaster-General . . . Besides the aviation matter the market looked to Washington for settlement of the motor labor trouble . . . As well as the extension of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation . . . Both of which were disposed of to the satisfaction of most stiff backed conservatives . . . It seems to us there has been a suitable change for the better in Washington news affecting business and finance.

* * *

Shorts: With the market dawdling along in its present wishy washy manner, it would be necessary to emulate fiction writers to get anything new about it down on paper . . . The gold clause decision possibilities simply have it licked . . . Steel shares and scrap steel prices are both pessimists while production figures are optimists . . . It is hard to make a choice of either . . . so the best thing to do is stay on the sidelines as far as the group is concerned.

* * *

The people that should know are crossing inflation possibilities off the book. Yet some brokerage and banking circles insist it is unavoidable. It may be that contact makes us susceptible to ideas of the latter group. But somehow when the cables are read telling of English opposition to stabilization and possibility of further sterling declines it is hard to see how another cut in the gold value of the dollar is to be avoided.

* * *

Coal shares are likely to find the cold spell a force of sufficient potency to inspire one last fling on the upside. At the same time increased industrial activity is aiding consumption and shipments for this last named customer are likely to have an early boost that will enable a bullish comparison with 1934. Shares of coaler railroads should not be overlooked in attempts to anticipate the results marketwise.

Standard Oil Of New Jersey

Analysis Prepared by the Fitch Investors' Service

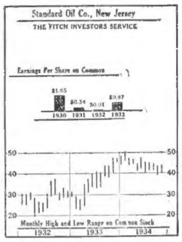
Active in every phase of the industry in the United States, from crude production through marketing of refined products, the company will benefit from the expected orderly marketing and stable price structure to be expected from rigid federal enforcement of production curbs.

While the price weakness during the past months may confine the improvement to modest proportions, 1934 results should better the 97 cents reported for 1933.



Natural gas sales should add to earnings for the current year, in view of increased demand from industrial centers served by the company and affiliates.

Refunding of $90,000,000 in debentures with low interest bank loans and serial debentures, to be privately held, is a continuation of the program of elimination of senior obligations. Low interest rates now available make refunding on this basis attractive.

Co-operation with Socony-Vacuum Corporation in the Far East is an important long-term factor. Pooling of facilities and marketing organizations should lead to improved sales at lower cost, and consequently better profit margins in this territory.

Standard of New Jersey, the world's largest organization in the petroleum industry, is a holding company, operating entirely through numerous subsidiaries and controlled companies, including Humble Oil & Refining, Imperial Oil, Colonial Beacon Oil, Carter Oil, etc. It is the world's largest refiner and the second largest producer, and is among the leaders in distribution, marketing and a wide line of allied fields. It is also a leading natural gas producer and distributor.

MARKET LOWER Near Dull Trading Close

New York, Feb. 1—The stock market started February with prices easier today as trading proceeded at a slow pace.

United States Steel preferred appeared on the tape 85 bid, 89 offered. Later the bid was raised and finally the stock changed hands at 88½ and then declined to 87¾. Steel common, Bethlehem and other steel shares were dull and easier.

General Motors, Chrysler and other motor shares were dull and mixed.

Utility shares were little effected by the P. W. A. allotment of funds for a New York city federal power plant.

A break of more than a point in Atchison to a new low unsettled the carrier shares.

Radio preferred B was weak in the specialties, losing more than a point. Tobaccos were soft.

Wheat, after early firmness, sold down fractionally, and cotton declined 25 cents a bale. Bonds were dull and erratic.

Carloadings

A decline in car loadings for the week ended January 26, of 7,187 cars was not interpreted as unusually bearish. The total of 555,768 was seen as about seasonal by one statistical service, while another estimated it as a little more than seasonal.

Nervousness was still apparent over the uncertainty of a possible gold clause decision Monday and heaviness of various stocks was attributed almost directly to this influence.

The extension of the automobile code by the President had been generally expected. In this connection Wall Street was principally interested in potential labor repercussions.

Overnight study of the Bethlehem Steel report, which indicated the corporation had enjoyed a small profit in 1934 compared with a deficit of nearly $9,000,000 in the previous year, was helpful to the constructive viewpoint.

Curb Stocks

PRICES MIXED NEAR CLOSE

New York, Feb. 1 (INS)—The curb market was irregular today, with demand for favored issues offsetting liquidation in a handful of stocks.

Among the specialties, Dow Chemical ran up 2½ points to 88½. Gains up to a point were credited to Axton Fisher A, Celanese 1st preferred and Sherwin Williams, but Singer Manufacturing tumbled 10 points to 240.

Commonwealth Edison and Duke Power gained a point each in the utilities and Brown Forman was up ¾ in the alcohols.

Metals and oils held narrowly.

Blue Ridge preferred held the investment trusts with a gain of almost a point to 40¼. Atlas was up ¼ at 8¾.

The Cities Service issues continued dull and steadq.

Sharp declines in the Russian Imperial issues following collapse of the debt negotiations with the Soviet unsettled an irregular bond market.

Bar Gold

London, Feb. 1 (AP)—Bar gold advanced 3 pence to 142s. 4d. (U. S. equivalent, $34.67.)

Governments

New York, Feb. 1—United States Government bonds were strong in moderate dealings today.

Ever since "Bill" Borah and "Hi" Johnson split, back in 1912 when Theodore Roosevelt was launching his "Bull Moose" campaign, there has been rivalry and feeling between the two famous Republicans.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, PROSPERITY PRESIDENT, GREAT AMERICAN, WROTE:

NORTHAMPTON, May 1, 1931—With the convocation of representatives of various lines of industry have come proposals for controlling and standardizing business.

Almost all these suggestions are for ARTIFICIAL RULES of conduct to save a situation from the inevitable consequences of THE FORCE OF NATURAL LAWS.

If business is to be controlled from the outside the liberty of action and power of initiative will be greatly circumscribed.

If standardization is adopted in its entirety the result is RIGID FOSSILIZATION WHICH PREVENTS PROGRESS.

Neither the State nor the Federal Governments can supply the information and wisdom necessary to direct the business activity of the nation.

About all that can wisely be done in this direction is provided by trade organizations.

Additions to the system promise most if they are VOLUNTARY and provide a better co-ordination of activities.

One of the fundamental needs is sound banking. Our financial power continually needs diversion from wrong channels and direction to right channels.

The experience, skill and wisdom necessary to guide business CANNOT BE ELECTED OR APPOINTED. It has to GROW UP NATURALLY from the people. The process is long and fraught with human sacrifice, but it is the only one that can work. Edison and Ford are not Government creations.

Bungling Our Exports
With Visionary Ideas

THE visionary ideas and dilatory approach of Secretary of State Hull are handicapping the United States in the export field.

Bungling at Washington is rendered almost inevitable by the fact that fifty or more organizations within our government at present deal with foreign trade activities.

We have stood on the sidelines while four hundred bargaining trade agreements have been entered upon by various nations in the last five years.

Meantime, England, recognizing her true interests, has moved expeditiously, making advantageous trade and debt collection agreements.

OUR own capacity to act effectively under the recent reciprocal tariff legislation has been vitiated by Mr. Hull's insistence on adhering to the unconditional most favored nation principle, which Great Britain has recently had the good sense to discard.

By this principle, tariff concessions made to one nation for reciprocal advantages are automatically applied to all countries with whom we have most-favored-nation treaties.

George N. Peek, special foreign trade advisor to President Roosevelt, stated the issue succinctly in a recent speech in which he said:

"To pursue this policy of selective exports and imports it will be necessary for us to abandon the unconditional most-favored-nation policy adopted under the Harding administration and to return to the traditional American policy of extending conditional most-favored-nation treatment only, which prevailed from 1789 to 1922."

IN setting up an American objective, Mr. Peek declared:

"We should pursue a policy of selective exports and imports, sending abroad, preferably in manufactured form, those products we can best produce, particularly those agricultural products which are the backbone of our foreign trade and of our domestic prosperity, taking in return those raw materials which we need and such other products the importation of which will do the least violence to our domestic economy.

"We should decide for ourselves what imports we will take . . . If we are to abandon any measure of that protection it should be only in exchange for tangible advantages to us."

This appeals to us as sound American doctrine.

But Secretary Hull and Mr. Peek are at loggerheads over fundamental matters pertaining to foreign trade policy.

It is high time that President Roosevelt recognized that he cannot simultaneously ride two horses running in opposite directions.

Richard Washburn Child
Served America Well

Richard Washburn Child's sudden death from pneumonia was a distinct shock to his friends.

Although comparatively young—he was only 54 years of age—his career was notable for the number of his useful activities and distinguished public employments, reaching their culmination in his appointment as American Ambassador to Italy in 1921 by President Harding, a post he continued to fill under President Coolidge until 1924.

It was during his official sojourn in Italy that he formed a personal friendship with Mussolini, which led to his collaboration with the Duce in the writing of the latter's biography.

The work of a writer always appealed to Mr. Child. His novels began to appear as early as 1910, and followed one another in rapid succession.

Some of his most appreciated books, however, were not in the field of fiction, but depicted his life as a diplomat and, in a pleasant style, set forth his impressions of foreign scenes which had become familiar to him, and of European statesmen whom he had known well.

His was a rich and many-sided personality. His allegiance was always to his own country, and his viewpoint was that of uncompromising Americanism.

Born in Worcester, Mr. Child was graduated from Harvard and for many years took an active part in New England affairs. In 1924 his alma mater bestowed on him the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

This newspaper marks with deep regret his passing.

Home Beauty Wins
Praise of Governor

The old Governors of Massachusetts—especially those of the Colony—were mostly drab, sober fellows.

They probably would have been sincerely shocked by the sentiment expressed by their latest successor, Governor Curley, before the New England Hairdressers' Association at the Statler.

"I wonder if it isn't about time in America," remarked the Governor, "that we erected a memorial to some woman who has achieved distinction with lipstick and face powder."

Governor Curley went on to explain that he believed one of the most important tasks is to make women look MORE beautiful.

"If we only had women more beautiful and less frowzy," he stated, "especially in the home, there would be fewer divorces."

We can easily agree with the Governor that anyone who succeeds in cutting down the appalling number of divorces well deserves a memorial.

TORCH OF OUR LIBERTY

The trap was set to snare our land
In League of Nation chains.
All hail to those who kept us out—
Those Senators with brains!

One land—one light enough for us.
It shines from shore to shore,
And with that beacon for our guide
We don't need any more.

We stand in strength within the land
This torch illuminates.
We'll have no foreign "isms" here,
Nor mix in Old World hates.

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

Jimmy started it. Now it's up to you to finish it—if you can!

Jimmy's sixteen. Third year in Hi. Next week he's due to speak before his Current Events Club on "THE MARCH OF PROGRESS." So won't I please give him a few tips?

Elsie Robinson

Sure I would—said I. And started. Then stopped—feeling funny. "The March of Progress"—there must be plenty of evidence for that. OR IS THERE?

What is progress, anyway? Improvement? But have we improved? All these discoveries. Machines. Modern conveniences. Do they mean progress—to YOU? Have you improved YOUR life?

The ads tell you they do. So you believe the ads. You take it for granted that this Machine Age is the berries and that humans are having the best break yet. But are they?

Is life easier for you than it was for your grandfather? You assume it is—never thought of doubting it, did you? But is it?

You ride in elevators, automobiles, airplanes. You telephone for your groceries—turn a faucet for water—punch a button for light. There's a machine to serve practically every human need.

But have thase machines really simplified life—made it easier? Or have they made it infinitely more complicated, expensive and dangerous?

Life easier than for grandfather? I wonder. Has a youngster as good a chance to make a place for himself in life as in grandfather's time?

Does a woman—in spite of suffrage—enjoy the protection her grandmother enjoyed? Is she as sure of love and respect and security in her old age?

Life lasts longer. Science has conquered many forms of death. Yes—but has science added to the joy of living? Have we less strain? More rapture? More freedom?

"You can't deny, though, that people are kinder," someone will say. "Think of the horrible massacres in the days of Rome—the awful cruelties of the Roman arena.

"Think of men hanging in chains in England, hardly a hundred years ago—of little children deported to Australia in the black, poisonous holds of convict ships—"

But was death in a bloodstained arena more horrible than the gas poisoning of modern warfare?

Is it harder for a man to die in chains than to live in them in a convict chain gang?

Progress—I wonder. I've always assumed that we're making it. I still assume it. I'm sure that our human world is bigger and better than it ever was before.

But now that you press me for reasons, young Jim, I'll confess I'm stumped! So I'm passing it on.

"She'll Never Marry!"
By Winifred Black

The prettiest girl in the world says she's not going to be married.

Not she. Never and never. Her sisters are all married and she's seen them turn from gay, light-hearted girls into rather bored, a good deal tired, matrons and nobody brings them roses and nobody threatens to commit suicide if one of the sisters won't promise to be at the garden gate when the moon is just exactly in the right spot in the sky.

Winifred Black

The prettiest girl has a good time and she's going to go right on having it. She says she doesn't intend to tie herself down to any man in the world.

Men are selfish things, she says, and they're sort of indifferent and mean-tempered, and she wouldn't marry the best one that ever lived. All the handsome ones are treacherous and all the loyal ones are ugly.

The gay, entertaining men always know dozens of women and the one-love-of-his-life man is always too dull for words. So the prettiest girl is going to give them all the go-by.

Well, now, I wish the prettiest girl would just come up to New York with me and spend, oh, let's say, three months. I like to take her tea-rooming.

Have you ever done much tea-rooming, if you know what I mean? Do you remember the forlorn pairs who wander in about 7 o'clock and have a bite of this and a sup of that and try to look as if it was all a gay adventure? Somewhere between 35 and 45 they are—the most of them, and not a man in sight. And no home in the background.

Coffee late on Sunday morning, the Sunday papers, a walk in the park and then the tea room—why, the air in those tea rooms is sort of exhausted and you feel as if you were a rabbit in some kind of a test apparatus.

The women are nervous and restless. They laugh a lot—some of them. But somehow I'm always sorry for them.

And I can't help thinking that the nice, chubby, head waitress who has a sick husband at home and two husky children to support is better off than the most successful well-to-do of these poor lonely independents.

I'd rather be a sentimental scrubwoman in love with some good-for-nothing nobody and just thrilling to think what a good supper I'm going to have for him when I get home, and how surprised he'll be and maybe he'll take me to a show afterward, than to be a lonesome, frustrated human being with nothing on earth but a bank account to live for.

Before History's Dawn

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

In these depression years "Man looks before and after, and pines for what is not." His sense of historicity is hightened in hard times and dulled in flush times.

Edwin C. Hill

We now have a swarm of Utopias and we also have in evidence all that nostalgic advertising, trying to associate the product with the good old days. We are all looking for a "better 'ole."

But even more pertinent and interesting is the splendid advance made by scientists in linking together the story of mankind, the origin of the earth, the beginnings of life, the evolution of man, his first erect posture, the growth of his rudimentary brain, the slow beginnings of what, for want of a better word, we call civilization.

SOLVING THE PUZZLE

Slowly the picture-puzzle of the ages is being filled out.

Leonardo da Vinci, great Renaissance artist and possibly the greatest genius the world has produced, was, so far as we know, the first man to get a bird's-eye view of the earth as the house of life, of lowly creatures merging into man, of cooling lava, of the relationships of fossils and bones, the changing skeletal structure of life—the story of mankind from the Neanderthal man to Goethe.

And here today is the contribution of an artist giving again the "totalitarian" view of man.

It is that Whittlesey House book, "Before the Dawn of History," with text and drawings by Charles R. Knight.

Mr. Knight is a scientist as well as an artist, and in his minutely detailed drawings, which to me hold enthralling interest, he adheres to scientific validity, a factual and artistic combination which gives the book a highly unique character.

Unless I am mistaken, most of us are eye-minded, and this pictorial record conveys a story which marches along like good drama, as man—hairless, feeble little short-ender among the great shaggy, armored creatures—outwits his enemies and sets up his rule on the planet.

ORIGIN OF HAND

The fashioning of the human hand had a lot to do with the advance. The little big-eyed lemurs, living around the North Pole, when the climate there was like Miami today, seem to have originated the hand. They were only cousins of the apes, and not our direct ancestors, say the scientists, but the evidence is that they gave us the hand.

One is reminded that Leonardo da Vinci, late in the Fifteenth century, sculptured on the Campanile of Il Duomo at Florence a perfectly good outline of an aeroplane of today—wings, fuselage and all, and he intended it for an aeroplane. It was no accident.

Mr. Knight's fascinating drawings of prehistoric man include the Neanderthal Man and the Cro-Magnon Man in family groups, their utensils, weapons and, of course, detailed studies of the savage prehistoric landscape and the fabulous creatures with whom man fought for mastery.

Amazing, it seems, that man won the decision. But not only hands but a brain case were evolving, and it was an unbeatable combination — dexterity, mobility, adaptability against rigidity and brute force.

I know an old race track railbird who is one of the few men who ever steadily made money betting on races. He says that he depends entirely on past performances.

For this and other reasons, I am convinced that the scientists aren't wasting time in the backward look. Their findings may have an important bearing on our continued ownership and operation of the planet.

Public Sentiment Smashes League Court Farce

Public sentiment is everything. With public sentiment nothing can fail; without it nothing can succeed.—Abraham Lincoln.

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Abraham's faith in the power of public sentiment is vindicated anew by what has happened in the Senate of the United States.

Senator Johnson

It was the power of public sentiment which has just saved the United States from any political entanglement with "the evil thing with a holy name," the League of Nations.

This power came from the people themselves. They firmly resolved fifteen years ago that they would not permit the United States to go into the League of Nations and they have steadfastly maintained this position against the "insidious wiles of foreign influence."

PEOPLE RESPONDED

Less than a fortnight ago the alarm was sounded from one end of the country to the other. And the answers came to the floor of the Senate in thousands of letters or telegrams. These messages came from all sorts and conditions of true Americans on all walks of life.

The result of this appeal, coming up from the great heart of the American people, north, south, east and west, released senators from commitment made under the pressure of a propaganda worked up in large by the walking delegates of foreign powers and the representatives of their fettered press.

The aim of all these was to take the United States into the maelstrom of European quarrels, willy nilly.

Every man and woman in this country who has written or telegraphed a senator in Congress to keep out of the League of Nations and its League Court in recent weeks has helped to win the victory.

All share the thanks that are due those who fought the good fight for the faith of the fathers and won a smashing victory.

THE PRETENSE

There was the pretense that the league's terms for American membership in its court protected the treaty-making functions of the Senate—proven false, in the masterly brief filed with the committee on foreign relations months ago by the Honorable J. Reuben Clark of Utah, eminent jurist, able diplomatist and patriot quickened by the spirit of the fathers.

This brief was never answered because it could not be answered. Its facts could not be challenged.

Its arguments could not be refuted and its author is entitled to the satisfaction and is due the honor of knowing that no more brilliant contribution to the clarification of this issue was made by anybody in or out of the Senate.

Under the leadership of Senator Johnson of California and the other never-to-be-forgotten senators who were associated with him in this work of American salvation—these defenders of our heritage from Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Hamilton and Marshall, Jackson and Grant, Abraham Lincoln, Grover Cleveland, William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt have earned the thanks of their country for the service they have just performed.

To the American calendar of patriotism should now be added January 29, 1934—anniversary of a great battle—the battle won by the American people to keep out of "permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world." It was the people's fight from first to last. Theirs was the power that Lincoln knew to be "everything."

The remembered man—George Washington.

Governor Curley evidently clings to the idea that assets of a closed bank belong to the depositors.

Baton Rouge is just a red club in the hands of Huey Long.

Poetically speaking of this winter—now is the anthracite of our discontent.

Cold waves, keep away from our door!
